EDITORIAL

Darlings,

Hope life is being wonderful to you all. Lately things here at FMI couldn't be better. Oh sure, we are behind schedule a little, but I know our readers would not mind waiting an extra week or two so we could cover some of the events and people we are presenting in this issue!

As usual we enjoy the letters and photos we've received these past weeks. They always open us up to the things you want to hear about. Coming up in a future issue we have an in-depth article regarding hormones. We get so many inquiries about where to get them, how to use them etc., that we are now talking to a real authority on the subject. She has consented to do an article for us, so keep your eyes open for the next few issues.

Also, Heather Fontaine is back on the West Coast headlining at the Queen Mary. We know what a heartthrob she is to our readers so wait till you see her now!

I would again like to apologize to the writers who do not get their very personal letters answered promptly, but with publishing and filmmaking when does a "girl" find time? We do try to answer some of the questions in our "Letters to the Editor" column. Personal letters are very time consuming so please understand. I still love you dearly.

Well until the next issue, all you wonderful people out there, (now come on let's see more photos and things)!

All my love
& best wishes,

Kim Christy

BATTLE OF THE VIP'S CONTEST

Empress LaRey has done it again! She's been busy producing another extravaganza, this time the marvellous contest THE BATTLE OF THE VIP'S. Dazzling lights, gorgeous costumes and a talented array of contestants set the scene for this amazing production at the Mayflower Ballroom in Los Angeles, the glitter city of America!

We managed to get some excellent seats (near the stage) so that we could study the contestants and do our own judging. Girls, was this ever difficult! There were two categories: THE GODDESS OF 1983, a female impersonation contest, and MR. VIP 1983, women in men's attire.

With a "Scandanavian" theme this year, we were treated to some of the most incredible costumes and solo acts we've ever seen. In fact the winner of MR. VIP 1983 was a Viking, in full regalia including horns and beard!

OUR GODDESS OF 1983 is Ghenerie Devere, who has a lovely and elegant presence, reminiscent of the late Princess Grace. We were sitting close enough to see the tears stream down her cheeks as the winning banner was fixed to her sequin gown.

The evening ended on an up note, as do ALL of Empress LaRey's affairs. Once again we were delighted with the enormously successful and truly professional exhibition of talent and showmanship. Who will be next year's winners? MAYBE YOU!

Letters to the Editor

IF YOU WISH TO WRITE TO KIM AND POSSIBLY HAVE YOUR CORRESPONDENCE PUBLISHED, PLEASE ADDRESS IT TO KIM CHRISTY, C/O FEMALE MIMICS INTERNATIONAL, P.O. BOX 1622, STUDIO CITY, CA 91604.

Dear Kim Christy:

I would like to say that I have just purchased Female Mimics Int. Volume 12, No. 5 #13 with Nikko as cover girl. I've seen Nikko before in another magazine with Sulka. I have to say it is different but everyone has his idea in life and this country and all government agencies should let us live it our own ways. The people who are photographed in this magazine are very good at what they do or are. As for Nikko a she-male is sexy and I'd never guess she was one nor Marla, or Tony Midnight. I'd seen Shinchi Morita while I was in Japan, Tokyo. As for the Queen of the Universe 1983 I would have chosen a few: 19, 5, I believe she was #4, 16 was okay too. But to be honest if I could talk personally and be discreet. I don't have anything against anyone who does his or her thing, except Congress, those people really can hurt people—like present. But there is a lot more I would like to know about books on she-males, and where can I get your publication easier. You see I'm a trucker but seldom get close to towns with adult stores or it's too hard to get around with that buggy in sail. I am also wondering if it is possible to have correspondence with Nikko or Sulka. I'm from Minneapolis, MN but even though I've seen a lot of gays there, they seem to cause trouble for themselves for what acts are done on the Hennipen Ave. area during the summer. But I guess I need a lot more reading material to understand it all. But I hope that your FMI magazine gets off like some girly books do.

Yours truly,
MBK

P.S. Keep up the good work and information as well as pictures.

Dear MBK,

You guys on the road sure have it rough, but chances are you have a choice of many stores to buy FMI than most. The stores in the bigger cities always have it, somehow we have problems in the smaller ones, but hang in there, we hope to be out in full force before too long.

Kim Christy

Dear Kim,

I am writing to you because I love your magazine. It is hard to find in my area of Connecticut. So whenever I can, I drive to New York and pick up copies. Although I have missed issues, the ones I have helped me a lot. I loved your personal photo album.

I have always crossdressed since I can remember. The first Halloween costume my parents let me make was as a girl. I was around 9 years old at the time. The only thing my parents didn't realize is that how thrilled I was going out that way. That Halloween I got "dressed up" very early. I was every inch a girl that night. I still remember my mother putting on my lipstick (which I picked out) last. My favorite part was then going out to all my relatives. I enjoyed being a girl for them. My aunts all hugged and kissed me. I felt as if they wanted me to stay as their new niece! I was so thrilled. Ever since then I crossdressed in my room. When I was home alone, enjoyment for me wasn't watching television or going out to play but to be dressed up.

Going shopping with my mother through the girls department was great, seeing all the fashions of clothes. Then going home and imagining what I would have bought or how I would look in them. Later, after getting my drivers license, I would finally go back and buy clothes for myself. Soft angora sweaters are my passion. My mother always says that I should have been a girl.

Now I'm 22 years old. The pictures I sent were taken by myself. I read the excellent article by Linda Lee. That was a great help. I learned some make-up tips from various magazines. I actually look better than these pictures show, really! The colors did not come out exactly. I will send black and white photos when I get them for your magazine. I am 6 feet tall and very thin. I have wide hips (for a boy) and with a corset I have a very feminine figure. I have gone out in my car dressed up to find out if I can pass in public. I drove around and got some admiring glances from many cars. I even parked my car to walk around with no problems except for a couple of cars "tooted" their horns at me. I believe I really passed when I had to walk past two police officers!

Right now I am not working but collecting unemployment. So I think this is a good time for me to finally do what I really want to do. Be a professional female impersonator. I will definitely give it my best. I have some ideas on who I want to give the illusions of. I'd like to do Dottie West, Olivia Newton John, and other female artists. I'd like to copy "Mickey" dressed as a cheerleader.

Kim, I am really sincere in everything I have written. I am planning on moving out to the Los Angeles area around September. I want to be the best I can be. I know it is really hard for you with your busy schedule, but I'd like to ask a favor of you to write me on who could help me learn to perform in this great art form. Learning how to dance and making-up my face the correct way is so important to me. I realize there are going to be obstacles, but I am willing to overcome them. On television I've seen the clubs out there, and after watching that I knew I wanted to do that. I think I have a good face for illusions of different women (since I take after my mother). I sincerely hope you can find the time to answer me.

I sent along a self-addressed stamped envelope. I live here with my parents. This is really what I want to do and I want to start out right.

Thank you for your time and cooperation.

Sincerely yours,
HM

Dear HM,

You already have a very professional attitude. May I suggest practicing with your friends using your favorite tapes to polish up an act for yourself, small parties and get togethers—that is the way I started.

Kim Christy

Dearest Kim Christy:

Many thanks for your letter informing me of "Sulka's Wedding," at the Hollywood Blvd. Pussycat Theatre.

I saw it and thought it was just excellent. It should be with you the creative artist behind it as I did note your screen credits.

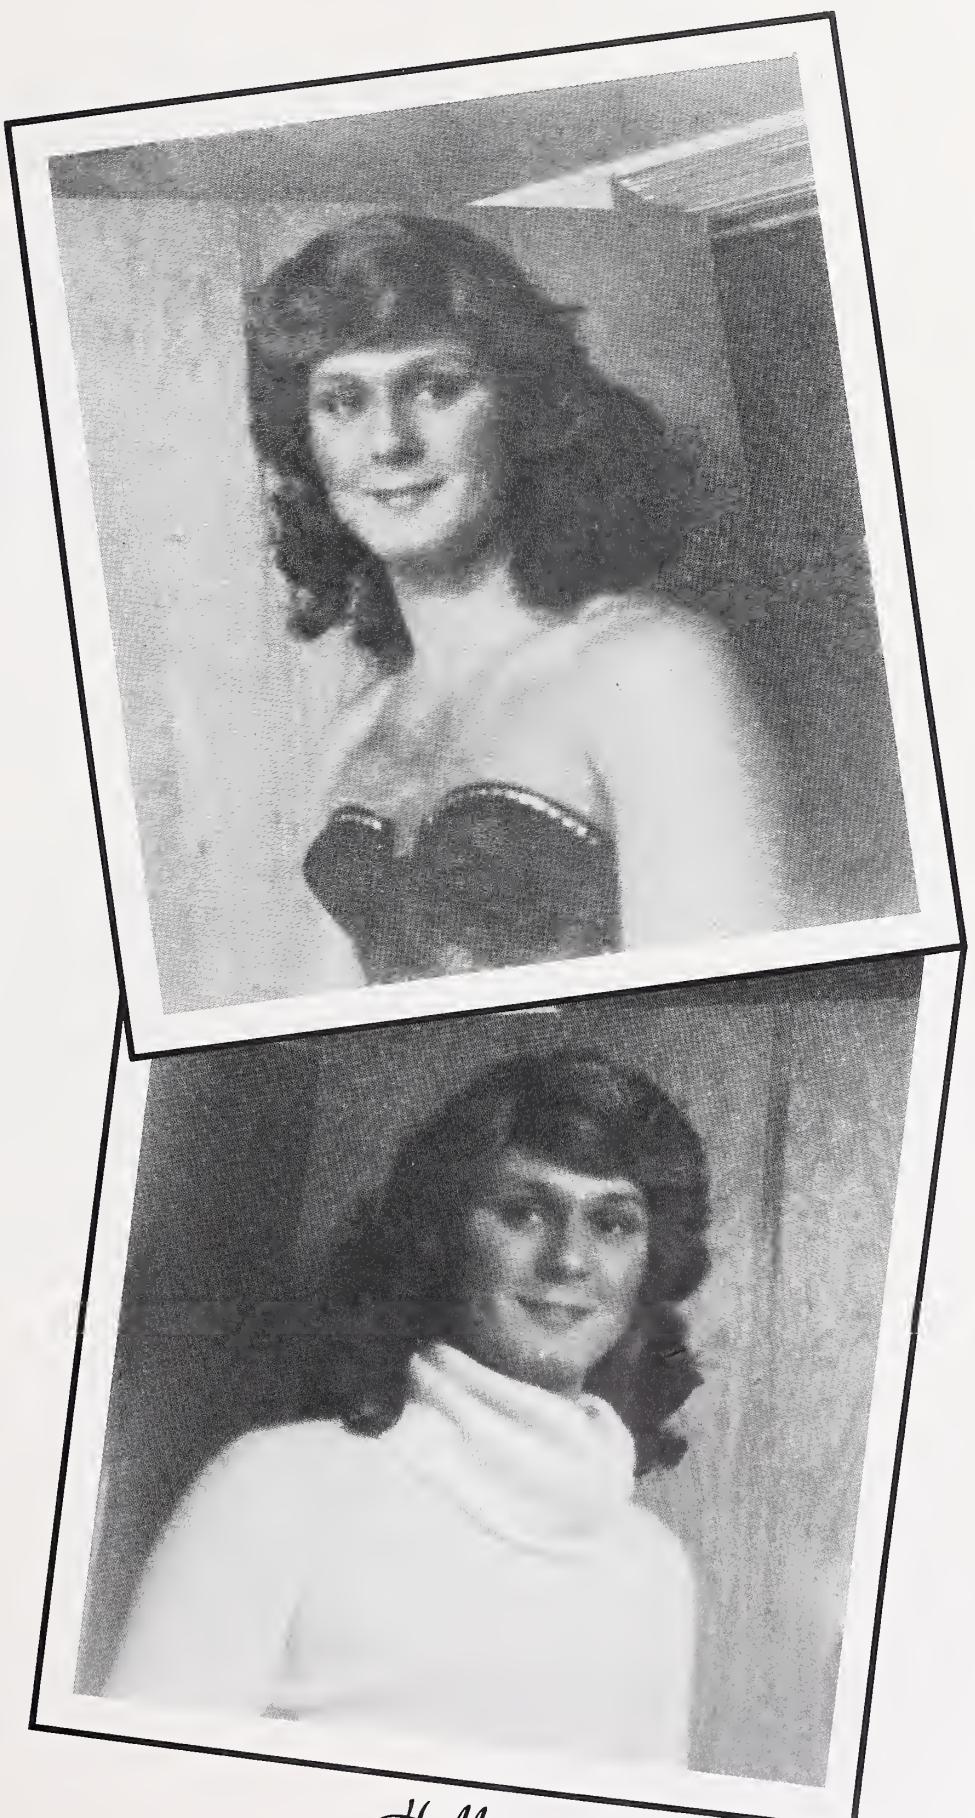

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner had in its ad, "Sulka's Wedding is the most shocking adult film we have ever presented."

I didn't consider it shocking but oh so entertaining and one movie that can really turn you on—in many ways.

Of course I enjoyed Sulka, but I secretly fell in love with Jennifer. "She" maintains an electricity in her personality that is hard to explain. The whole cast was just terrific. Thanks again for telling me about it. I'll tell all my friends and plan to see it several times more.

Much, much love,
Judy

P.S. Perhaps I shouldn't tell you this—but I did cum twice in my panties before the movie ended. OHHHHHHH so fun.

H.M.

Dear Judy,

You naughty thing, but we love you dearly!

Kim Christy

Dear Kim,

Your efforts in behalf of Female Mimics Int. is appreciated by at least one TV—me. It is done in extreme good taste and avoids the vulgar aspects of crossdressing so often sensationalized in the press and magazines. Keep up the good work.

I have been an admirer of yours for years. I remember the first pictures I saw of you in Lee Brewsters Queens and have often wished I could get back to California in hopes of meeting you. One of my treasured magazines is a copy of King Size Queens in which you appeared.

I would love to have an autographed picture of you if that is possible.

Sincerely,
MK

Dear MK,

One thing a girl can't have is too many admirers or too much money. Get it?

Kim Christy

Dear Kim,

I have just relocated in N.Y. from the Midwest and have been able to purchase your magazine for the first time. Having read through several rather lucid (actually pornographic) publications while out of the Big City I am just so happy to see Female Mimics Int. on a counter. The photography which highlights the clothes, and particularly the make-up, of the beautiful she-males on your pages is just as fantastic as the subjects are. It portrays each girl as we all wish to be—beautifully gowned, coiffured, and perfectly made up gorgeous females. A class act by class people—proving that the boob and penis portrayals of TVs that many mags feature are not what we're all about. I think I'm as sexually oriented and responsive a person as anyone but the beauties featured on your pages as you yourself when you appeared in the 82 Club need no gimmicks to show the world what a she-male really is! Congratulations and good luck in your future ventures.

I'd like to offer my sympathy on the passing of Brandy—I was privileged to have caught her act in the early 70s at the 82 while at a Prom Nite. It was there I met and returned to be introduced physically to TVism by the gorgeous Toby Marsh. Have you ever heard of her whereabouts? I was never the same after sitting with Toby (and my date) between shows that evening. If I hadn't gone away to college that Fall who knows what would have happened to me. I often wonder—hmmm!

Anyway, I would like to have the privilege of placing an ad in your publication and enclosing a photo to go with it.

Yours truly,
Mona

Dear Mona,

Thank you for your letter and your inspiration. Toby Marsh is alive and well and lives in Boston, Mass last we heard!

Good luck with your ad.
Kim Christy

Dear Kim,

I recently read a letter in Female Mimics International from a man who wanted a TV for a wife. I hadn't thought of finding a wife for myself in that manner, but with your permission, I'd like to try.

I am not a TV. I'm attractive, romantic, intelligent, 33 years old, have brown eyes and brown curly hair, and am actively and seriously thinking of finding a lovely, young, feminine TV to be my wife. I'm a loving person, have a decent income and have a real need for the right person in my life. My wife should be a friend, confidante, passionate lover, tender, and interested in life in general. I believe in mutual trust and satisfaction, in working together for established goals, and in building a good life for both people in the relationship.

If you know of someone who needs a husband to be a loving and tender mate, please see if you can put us in touch. I'd be forever grateful.

With gratitude,
Ron

Usually we run ads in our personal ad section but . . .

He sounds like a wonderful catch, so what do you say girls, drop him a line, this could be "Mr. Right."

CAST OF 'CLUB 82'

DODO DIOR

I tried to tell Kim I just didn't have enough to write about this time but she wouldn't listen so here I am again. (You can always get to me with pleading and crying . . .) If the column reads like what a friend of mine refers to as "nothing, spread thin . . ." though, you'll know who to blame.

I wasn't kidding when I told Kim I didn't have much news. I've been so swamped at work that I haven't had time to pay attention to anything else.

In addition to helping put together one production which I co-authored, built props for and am performing in, I was given the job of directing another production, this one with a cast of fifteen nine-to-twelve year olds. This was the first time I've directed since college, and the first time I've ever directed children.

I loved them all, when I didn't feel like throwing them out the window. At the end of all the long rehearsals, though, the cast acquitted themselves very well and made me feel proud of them.

It brought home strongly something I've been somewhat aware of for some time, namely how much I wish I had children.

Many of you know I don't consider myself a candidate for surgery even though I've been on estrogen for several years now. One important reason is that the surgery doesn't offer me anything concrete I want. But if it was such that after surgery I could have children, that is bear children, I believe I'd be right in line for it.

The next best thing would be to father children but that hasn't happened either. I know several post-op people who were married and had children before their transitions and I envy them. It's true that the situation isn't without problems, but what situation is? And I see these children giving strength and support to their parents, as well as love.

It fascinates me how well children, at least young children can adjust to the change. In fact one male-to-female that I know was given her new name by her daughter.

But at this point, the circumstances would have to be truly remarkable if I were to become a parent.

First of all, my partner would have to love children, really love them. I don't think anyone who doesn't love children should try and be a parent. It's hard enough when you do! And it's hard enough growing up even when your parents do love you and let you know it.

Even more, I think my partner would have to love babies. So much of our personality is formed within the first year or two of our lives that I think it's really important that both parents love babies.

Linda Lee's Pages

Babies sense messages on a non-verbal level and know when they are truly loved and wanted, and these messages shape their entire lives.

On top of all this my partner would have to be compatible and able to deal with my gender concerns. In fact, to really make a stable relationship, my transgenderism would probably have to be a positive thing for my partner.

Not much to ask, is it!

It's thinking like this, I'm afraid, that makes me feel low, for it's something that means a lot to me and just seems out of reach.

The thought of adoption has crossed my mind, but it naturally wouldn't be satisfactory and, for that matter, doesn't seem much more possible. Again, I'd have to have a partner who loved children and even then that might not be enough. The late Kristi Kelly, the friend whose interview was published in F.M.I. Vol. 11 #5, wasn't able to make much progress toward adopting a child despite the large amount of money and other resources at her disposal. Adoption agencies, from what she told me, tend not to think too highly of transgendered people or indeed of any non-traditional situation.

I can understand how this might be the case. Their job, after all, is to find a home where a child will have the best possible chance at a good life. All things being equal the chances would be better in a home where the situation was "normal" than in a home where it wasn't.

This brings to mind a book that just came to my attention. Titled THE GENDER TRAP, it is the story of Cathy Brown, a male-to-female TS, and Chris Johnson, a female-to-male. They met before going through any major gender changes, fell in love, and decided to have a child before they pursued the changes any farther. They had a little girl they named Emma.

It's a complicated story dealing with their separate childhoods as well as with their lives after they met, and it leaves a great many questions unanswered, but it is good to see serious attention given to their situation.

Co-author of the book is Wendy Nelson, a newscaster on ATV, the commercial channel in Britain. It is encouraging to see someone relatively "visible" taking up a cause like this one.

For one thing it helps counteract the sensationalized coverage in the British tabloid press.

Britain has a long history of thoughtful responsible journalism exemplified by the LONDON TIMES. However, there is another tradition trading on anything sensational. This "Mr. Hyde" of British journalism is represented by NEWS OF THE WORLD. Our own NATIONAL ENQUIRER, British friends have told me, is only a pale copy.

More disturbing, perhaps, than the stories they print and thus promote are the tactics they sometimes use to get those stories. In the case of Chris and Cathy, a chance remark at a local pub by a social worker had the story in print before any of the principals could be contacted or the accuracy verified.

Once on the scent, though, a journalist was sent to track the couple down and did so that shortly the couple's house was literally "under seige" by reporters eager to get details on the story, so obviously of national importance.

Chris and Cathy literally locked themselves in for two days, but in the end had to capitulate as further stories about them, gleaned from other sources, were appearing anyway.

The most tragic aftermath of all this was that the publicity ruined Cathy's chance for surgery, at least with the doctor she had been consulting, since complete secrecy had been part of the arrangement.

Seeing how relentless the British tabloid press can be gives one an idea of why Tula and others have "gone public" rather than undergo continued hounding.

Thinking of Tula, I've had a chance to read her book. She writes with candor (allowing for the usual British reserve . . .) and good humor and her story is fascinating.

Occasionally I felt a little wistful over how neatly things fell into place for her as when a producer offered her a job as a showgirl even after she told him she was genetically male. Shades of Cinderella! Even so I enjoyed the book very much and the pictures are a knockout as one might expect.

As far as I know, the book is only available in this country from Lee Brewster (P.O. Box 834, NYC 10108) who imported 500 copies. It costs $7.95 plus postage and handling ($3.00 minimum).

It seems to me that British books which used to be so inexpensive are catching up to ours. Tula's book is a large-format paperback but the British price is just about the same as what Lee charges when one figures the added cost of shipping it over from Britain and all. And THE GENDER TRAP which is a British book, but distributed in this country by Scribner's is priced at $14.95.

Even higher in price, and not available in this country at all, as far as I know, is APRIL ASHLEY'S ODDYSSEY which carries a British price of £8.50 or very nearly $20.00. My friend Martin in London sent me a copy which arrived the other day. I haven't had a chance to read it completely yet, but it's a handsome book (as well it should be at that price!) and, according to the jacket blurb is just about the greatest thing since sliced bread. Well . . . I'll read it and report to you next time about that.

April Ashley is best known because she was, at one time, married to the Hon. Arthur Corbett, son and heir to the Chief Scout of the International Boy Scout movement.

Corbett, himself, indulged in bouts of cross-dressing (very elaborate ones involving a male brothel . . .) but was deathly afraid of exposure because of his social position.

He and April Ashley ended their short marriage in clouds of acrimony, for it was Corbett's contention that the marriage should be annulled on the grounds that April Ashley was a male, despite the genital surgery.

Unfortunately for those who have come after, Corbett's view was the one that prevailed and that is the reason that, for instance, Tula cannot marry in England, since her birth certificate can now never be altered, unless the law is changed.

Over here the autobiography of Renee Richards, titled SECOND SERVE has just been published. After reading some of the newspaper interviews with Ms. Richards which were published in various parts of the country as she made a promotional tour for the book, I've decided she is a much more interesting person than I'd previously thought. I understand from friends that she has already been to this area and I'm a little sorry I wasn't aware she was here. That's what comes of not getting a newspaper, I suppose.

Thinking of newspapers, my friend Kelley did show me a full-page article from the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE about the plight of transsexuals who, because they are not finished with the transition, are housed in men's prisons if they are arrested. It wasn't a terribly cheery story. The only encouraging thing about its appearance is that now more attention will be focused on the problem.

The same information was apparently picked up in other newspapers because my friend Tina from Wisconsin sent me a copy of a shorter article concentrating on the plight of Anna Maria Mostyn, facing a sentence of up to fifteen years for bank robbery.

According to the article, Anna Maria has been legally adopted by Joanna Clark whose name will be familiar to many F.M.I. readers from her struggle to be reinstated in the Armed Services after being discharged when it was discovered she was transsexual. Ms. Clark is fighting either for an early parole for Ms. Mostyn or at least for transfer to a facility where she can be segregated from the male prisoners. I'm sure we all wish Ms. Clark and Ms. Mostyn luck in their struggle.

On the lighter side, if the Oscar nominations were any indication, the subjects of cross-dressing and transsexuality are becoming at least worthy of consideration apart from their "exploitation" value.

As much as I admired the performance of Lou Gossett Jr., who won as Best Supporting Actor, I would really have liked to see John Lithgow win. As Roberta Muldoon (formerly Robert Muldoon, a tight end with the Philadelphia Eagles) in THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP, he had an extremely difficult part and brought it off superbly. It could easily have become a caricature, but he never let that happen. In fact he made Roberta a very real, very touching person as she is in the novel. And what's more makes Roberta believable both as a woman, and as a former football player. I can't think of many actors (or any transgendered person that I've ever met . . .) who could bring off this dual-leveled performance.

John Lithgow, like novelist John Irving, seems to have a keen sense of how hard things can be for ". . . people with complicated lives."

The transgendered community should be very grateful to John Lithgow and other people involved with . . . GARP for the care with which Roberta's character was treated.

I had a special interest watching the awards this year as a friend of mine was nominated as Best Supporting Actress for (interestingly enough) TOOTSIE.

This was Teri Garr with whom I did a couple of shows (musical revues) in our college days, and for those of you interested in such things, yes, she is a very nice person.

Unfortunately I didn't know she'd been cast in TOOTSIE until the film actually opened or I might have gotten in touch to offer her and Dustin Hoffman the real scoop on what it's like!

I was sorry she didn't win especially as I felt that Jessica Lange's performance, wonderful as it was, really belonged in the "Best Actress" category.

Still, I'm glad that TOOTSIE won in at least one category since it missed out in the other categories for which it was nominated.

The only sour note in the ceremonies for me was the "drag race" joke that came up early in the evening. A cheap shot, I thought, and not really necessary.

Among some film reviewers there had been speculation that Karen Black might be nominated for her part in COME BACK TO THE FIVE AND DIME, JIMMY DEAN, JIMMY DEAN, but no, no, she wasn't, wasn't.

I have to admit I'm glad, glad. I can understand why Robert Altman might choose to cast her in the part. It makes the final revelation that the character is transsexual that much more surprising since the audience is reasonably sure Karen Black isn't. But on the other hand I think that this part could have been played just as well by a transgendered person, and it makes me a little cranky that it was played by someone who wasn't. There have been a lot of examples of this sort of thing from THE CHRISTINE JORGENSEN STORY on down.

Sometimes it seems like the opportunities that should be unique to transgendered people all turn out to be illusions. One has only to think back to VERA—A LOVE STORY OF THE EIGHTIES, which seemed to mostly wind up being a story where transgendered people performed on videotape without getting paid.

Then there was SOMEDAY, BABY, the working title of the movie Kristi Kelly was going to produce based somewhat on her own struggle to be allowed a part in the life of her children. With her untimely death in the same plane crash that took the life of Amanda Winters, the film lost both its star and its producer and only a miracle could revive the project now.

The latest dream to bite the dust is, I'm sorry to report, the escort service I mentioned in my last column, Exquisitely Yours.

This is particularly frustrating for me because I found out some weeks back but it was too late to delete the mention of it in my last column (No. 14).

The fact is that Roxanne Patton, who was the mastermind of Exquisitely Yours, has dropped from sight like a snowman in July. Her phone is disconnected and the letter I wrote asking if everything was all right remains unanswered.

My biggest fear is that something has happened to Ms. Patton, an accident, illness, trouble in the family or something of the sort. There was certainly no question of her running off with "the money" because, as far as I know from all those who had dealt with her, the only money involved was Roxanne's own.

She had gotten so far as to tell a couple of my friends to expect their W-2 forms within a few days.

By the time it became clear she wasn't likely to reappear any minute, I was so swamped with work that I've had no chance to do any investigating.

However, I'm going to try and look into things at least a little, so I may have something more to report next time.

Meanwhile, though, here I stand with egg on my face, having given a glowing progress report last time of a project that seems, even before my congratulatory remarks could be published, to have sunk without trace.

On a cheerier note, my friend Riki mentioned in a letter that apparently Cathy Slavik does indeed plan another issue of the TRANSVESTITE WORLD DIRECTORY.

I got in touch with Cathy to confirm this and make arrangements for running my own ad. By the time you read this I imagine the new edition will be out. It's a wonderful resource and I recommend it to anyone who would like to meet other transgendered people.

The address for information is:

C. Slavik
P.O. Box 12466
Seattle
Washington 98111

I've met some of my best friends through Empathy, and I have a lot of admiration for the job Cathy does.

Meeting, first by letter, then in person, other transgendered people was one of the most important steps I ever took to coming to terms with myself, second only to discovering there were other people like myself out there. I might still be in the closet if it weren't for Empathy.

Instead I'm writing this column and speaking to college classes, though I haven't been doing much of that lately, because I just haven't had the time.

However, a particularly interesting opportunity has recently come up.

My own therapist is a really neat woman named Lin Fraser who has her office in San Francisco and also as facilitator for the TV/TS rap group at Pacific Center in Berkeley.

She specializes in gender concerns which is why I go all the way to San Francisco to see her! It was a big plus to find a therapist who knew about gender-related topics and didn't have to be "brought up to speed" as it were.

A few weeks back she was asked to speak to a graduate seminar in psychology at University of San Francisco and she suggested that perhaps she could get a transgendered person to speak along with her. The professor was delighted with this idea (which apparently had never been considered . . .). The upshot was that Lin asked me to speak along with her.

I'm looking forward to this for a number of reasons. First is the chance to speak to graduate students. Most of my speaking is done to classes at the undergraduate level and I'll be interested in the differences. In addition these students are mostly majoring or minoring in psychology and that should make for some interesting differences, too.

Finally, but by no means unimportant to me, is the chance to be speaking along with Lin. I admired her and the work she did long before I ever considered seeing her professionally and I

PRESENTING A STAR!

Girls, fix your eyes on a new beauty! Her name is SUMMER ST. CERELY and she is the sexiest; the most gorgeous and dazzling newcomer to hit the professional scene in years. There isn't an ounce of her body that doesn't overflow with talent, poise and style. That's it girls, she's got STYLE, the kind we're all jealous of because it appears only once in a lifetime.

Summer hails from San Diego, California. She's 5'8" and weighs 129 lbs. She's a professional all the way, an absolute artist with make-up application and hair styling. She knows how to highlight her big brown eyes magnificently. We haven't seen glamour and elegance like this in years!

Ms. St. Cerely is a professional dancer and singer. She performs on a regular basis in all the top spots in the country, having just recently finished a stint throughout the American western states. Her sharply chiseled features and alluring appearance are reminiscent of that sexy and voluptuous soul singer Tina Turner. She's also been compared to the lady who was Disco: Donna Summer. Our Summer may resemble these other ladies, but she's her own gal with her own approach and style of performance. In the future other performers will be compared to her!

Kim Christy discovered the seductress Summer and sponsored her in THE BATTLE OF THE VIP'S contest at the famous Mayflower Ballroom in Los Angeles. (More of the contest coverage in this issue!) Kim's contestant received high scores in the final balloting, a sure sign that this object of beauty will certainly succeed in her chosen careers! □

Desire to be chastised

"Would you like me to?" he asked as he felt a peculiar desire to be chastised by her as he wore the maid's outfit.

"Yes, I'll spank you with one of my slippers if you like." She got up, took one of her slippers from the wardrobe and sitting on her bed told him to lie over her knees.

Trembling in every limb with suppressed excitement, he lay over her legs whereupon she lifted back his dress, pulled down his knickers and started to hit him with the slipper.

He lay completely relaxed to the slaps as she brought the slipper down on his naked bottom, enjoying the wonderful sensation of submission it gave him.

"Am I hitting you too hard?" she asked him as she saw a red flush appearing on his buttocks.

"No, not at all, hit me harder," he said in a low, husky lust-charged voice. "As hard as you like."

She began to bring the slipper down quite fiercely and the harder she hit him the more he enjoyed it, his penis now hardening against her legs. When, eventually, she was almost exhausted with her efforts she stopped and put the slipper down.

"There now," she said, mimicking Lady Manton, "if you are naughty again I shall spank you even more severely."

That night they slept together, both of them wearing nightdresses, and it wasn't until early in the morning that Henry took her again. He suddenly realized that he was getting the best of both worlds, having an affair with the plump but attractive Irish woman while being able to carry on acting out his role as a woman.

When he came back from Fleet Street that evening he found that Molly had transferred some of the clothes she thought more suitable for him from her wardrobe to his, as well as putting various items of underwear in his dressing-table.

She said she had been so busy cleaning up the house and cleaning the downstairs rooms that she had hardly started on the supper. This suddenly struck Henry as an opportunity he was waiting for.

"Suppose I took you out to dinner?" he suggested.

"You dressed as a woman?" she inquired.

"Yes, that's the idea. I know it's risky but I should feel very confident with you." He didn't want to give her the idea that he was totally committed to cross-dressing so he hastened to add that it was something he just wanted to do once. In any case they'd go to a very quiet place with little alcoves and candles where no one would be likely to guess he wasn't a woman.

Molly helped him to dress and by the time they left the house he felt as certain as he could be that he would not be detected as a man wearing women's clothes. As they stepped from the gate at the end of the garden and out into the road Henry experienced one of the most intensely exciting moments in his life.

"I think the coat is just right for you," said Molly as she let him walk a few paces ahead to size up his appearance from behind. "And your legs are really like a woman's."

He took her arm and by the time they passed someone on the road he had gained his confidence. It was strange to feel one's legs so exposed, he thought, but the fact that Molly was satisfied that his legs looked all right gave him the courage he required. He began to hope that they would meet more people before they got to the busier streets so that he could be put fully to the test.

It was when two young men approached them from the opposite direction that he first had qualms about his appearance. They seemed to be on the look-out for two unaccompanied girls and they were very likely to scrutinize them carefully.

Molly tightened her grip on his arm as the men got closer to them and whispered something about walking straight on whatever they said.

As it happened they took no more than a passing glance at them though Henry saw as he took a quick look back that they had turned to look at their legs, just as he would have done himself in similar circumstances.

When they came to the main thoroughfare, Haverstock Hill, they were passing people all the time and Henry soon began to feel that he was absolutely safe for no one took any special note of them. There was still, however, the restaurant foyer to negotiate where Henry would have to take off his coat and he knew that would be the most difficult moment for him.

They reached the restaurant and were immediately approached by one of the waiters.

"Just two, madam," said the waiter, addressing Henry. Henry nodded, and Molly muttered something about a nice quiet table.

They were escorted into the restaurant itself and a number of eyes turned in their direction, but it seemed safe to assume that no one thought that there was anything strange about Henry for they dropped their gaze as they reached the table and sat down.

The dinner was quite a success, Henry leaving it to Molly to do the ordering as he was very unwilling to trust his voice. It wasn't until they were on their way home that they had their first risky encounter.

Two men had followed them from near the restaurant and as they reached a quieter part of Haverstock Hill they drew level and asked them if they would like to go for a drink.

"No," said Molly, firmly, "we're on our way home."

But the men persisted and one of them came round to Henry's side while the other walked alongside Molly, taking hold of her arm. "Well, we'll just walk back with you to your home," said one of them.

Henry felt the hand of the man at his left side slide into his and take his arm. "Are you in a great hurry?" he asked him.

"Yes, we are," said Molly, luckily hearing what the man had said, knowing that Henry would have to remain silent unless he wanted to risk exposure.

It was a near thing in the end but the men did not persist, except to ask for their phone number, when they reached the gate of the house.

"I'd like to see you again, darlin'," said the one who had taken Henry's arm. He looked into Henry's face and then bent forward and quickly kissed him on his lips. Henry decided it was better to allow him to kiss him rather than risk annoying him by turning his face away.

Then the two men made off, saying that they would be giving them a ring.

"Now we're in a mess," said Molly as they entered the hall.

"Oh, I'm not sure," said Henry. "It might be quite a nice experiment to have them back here one night for drinks. We could say we are married and that we don't go in for sex but don't mind a little flirtation. But by then I'll have to work on my voice."

"Are you sure that it's a good idea?" asked a somewhat more cautious Molly. "Suppose they found out?"

"They won't have to," was Henry's reply.

CHAPTER SEVEN

It had been an extraordinary thing for Henry to be dressed as a woman in the presence of two men, and he went over in his mind again and again those minutes when Molly and he walked back arm in arm with the two men who had insisted on accompanying them home. He found himself hoping that they would telephone as they had promised.

It was two days later that one of them rang. Molly answered the phone and when the caller asked her whether they could come round one evening she turned to Henry.

"I don't think it's a good idea, really, Henry," she said. "Suppose they found out?"

"I don't see why they should," replied Henry. "You say that I can be mistaken for a woman and neither of these men seemed to suspect that I was a man. I just want to prove to myself that I can get away with it."

Molly knew that she would have to agree to what Henry said so she turned back to the phone. "All right," she said, "we'll be here this evening. Come round for a drink about six o'clock."

Henry was excited at once and began to think about what he would wear and what precautions he should take in carrying out the role he was going to assume. He felt that if he wanted to dress as a woman it should be natural for him to take on the role in the presence of a man. It seemed to him logical that part of the pleasure of assuming a woman's role was to receive the compliments and admiration of a man.

"Don't forget that we're supposed to be married," said Molly. "That's essential if we are ever to get rid of them. We can say that we are expecting our husbands back. But you'll have to wear a ring."

"Yes, I suppose I will. I'd better go and buy one," agreed Henry.

"There's no need. I have a spare one—it's only a simple gold one but it will do. And I had better call your by a girl's name," added Molly.

It had never occurred to Henry that he ought to have a girl's name, but now that the suggestion had been put to him it seemed to him sensible and he rather liked the idea.

"What do you suggest?" he asked her.

"I don't know. I suppose whatever you choose I'll go and forget and call you Henry."

"Then what about Henrietta? If Henry slips out it would look as if you were shortening my name." Henry liked the thought very much of Molly calling him Henrietta.

"Yes," said Molly, "that's a good idea. Well, we'd better practice and get used to it. What are you going to wear, Henrietta?"

"Oh, the simplest thing and something that covers my arms. I think that black velvet dress of yours if you'd let me wear it."

"Of course. I think it will suit you and it's not too short. Then you can wear the black evening sandals with it and, if you like, black stockings too."

So it was agreed.

Henry tried out his voice, too, practicing a slightly lighter timbre and in the end Molly was satisfied that he would just about get away with it.

The bell rang at six precisely and the two men, who introduced themselves as Dennis and Peter, came into the lounge. Peter was the one who had taken an interest in Henry and it could be seen at once that he still hadn't changed his mind for he made a bee-line for him as soon as he saw him.

Henry felt delighted when he came over and said how attractive he looked. "I had no idea," he said, "that you were so attractive."

Henry smiled, not wishing to risk his voice too much. Molly told the two men that she was called Molly and that her friend was Henrietta.

"Henrietta!" commented Peter. "What a nice name." He took his drink from Molly and sat down on the sofa close to Henry.

Henry knew that he was now facing a supreme test but he felt much more confident than he had expected he would, smiling freely and looking at Peter without embarrassment.

It wasn't long before Dennis was slipping an arm round Molly and Peter was preparing to do the same to Henrietta.

Caressed by a man

"You know we're both married," said Henry, speaking in his feminine voice. "So please don't expect too much." He wanted to make it clear that things couldn't go very far, but despite an almost lifelong aversion to anything connected with homosexuality he now felt a great desire to be touched and admired by the young man at his side. It was then that he felt Peter's arm reach round his belted waist and a moment later he was lying in the man's arms as he felt his hot breath on his neck.

Molly looked with some alarm across at Henry but she received a reassuring look from him.

There seemed to Henry little danger of discovery unless the man slid his hand up his legs. And that Henry was determined not to allow.

Eventually Peter took Henry in his arms and for the first time in his life Henry found a man kissing him. It wasn't as unpleasant as he had anticipated and he soon began to return the kisses eagerly.

Slowly Peter's hand slid up Henry's dress and his hand reached about half-way up his thigh. At this point Henry gently pulled Peter's hand away.

"No, darling," he said, "We haven't time for that tonight as my husband will be back soon. But we'll have other chances."

"Promise?" said Peter.

"Promise," agreed Henry.

An hour later the two men left when Molly insisted that their husbands would be back any minute. Henry felt an extraordinary elation at the way he had succeeded in deceiving Peter and he lay back on the sofa unable to resist living over again the exciting moments when he had been kissed and caressed by a man

That night was to some extent a turning-point in Henry's life for he knew that he now had to face up to his situation. He could not go on deceiving Molly, nor could he ever risk again a situation like the one he had experienced that evening in which he might have been found out to be a man pretending to be a woman.

He wanted to find out about himself and what was motivating him and compelling him to dress and almost assume the role of a woman.

First of all he made up his mind to tell Molly about himself. He felt sure that she would understand him for she had shown no surprise at all when he had suggested taking her to the restaurant and her only objection to inviting Dennis and Peter round was the risk that Henry might be found out.

Secondly he decided to find out more about other men who dressed as women and possibly to consult a sexologist or a psychiatrist who specialized in sexual problems.

It was as a result of this decision that a few days later he consulted the present writer. What he told me on his first few visits has been written down here; what I found out about him later when I got to know him very well, how his transvestism developed, and the many adventures his cross-dressing got him involved in are the subject of the sequel to this book.

I love the fresh feeling I have when I wake up in the morning. The scent from my perfumed sheets and pillows always make me feel like I want to jump out of bed and immediately start a dance routine, or sashay through the house practicing my vocals.

I love to sing and I have the most fabulously sexy voice. I think I sound like Marlene Dietrich.

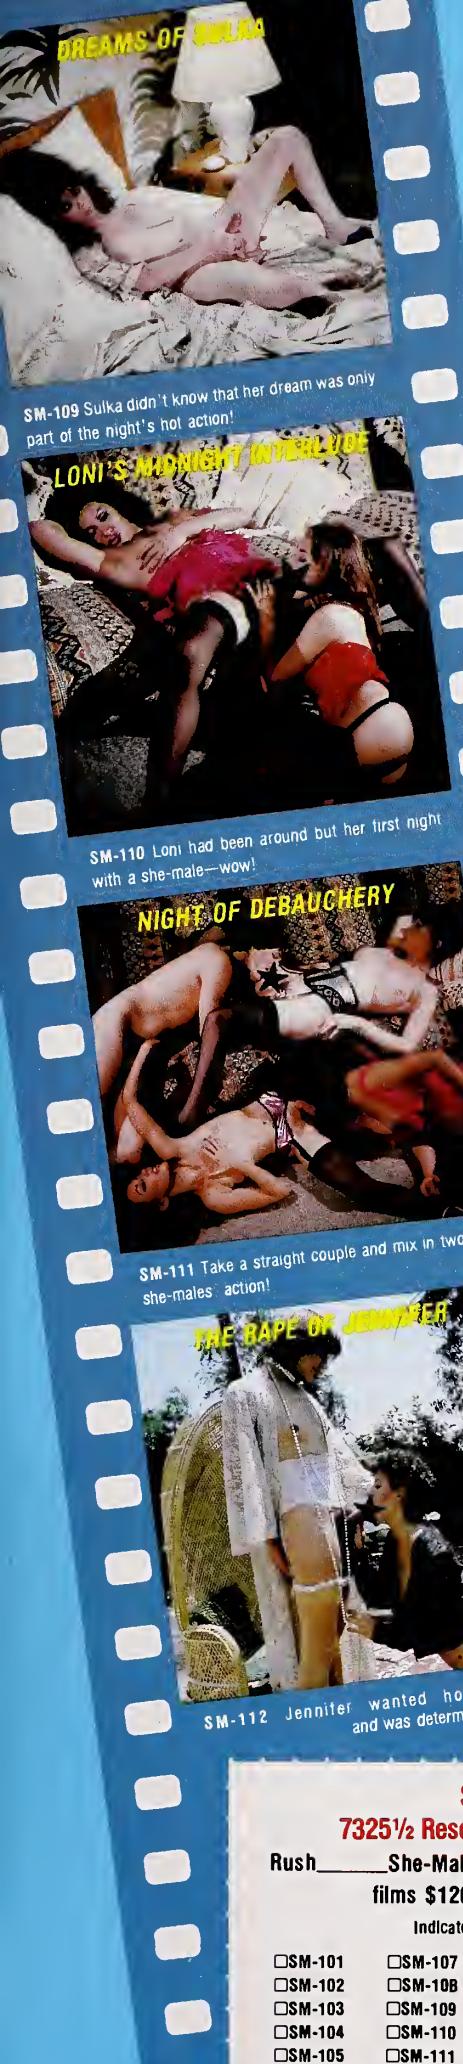

My friends seem to think so too because last October, for my birthday, they surprised me with a glittering party with "The Many Sides of Marlene" as the theme. It was just glorious! All my closest friends were there and ALL were fashioned after Marlene. I was the only one who wasn't dressed like her, but I made up for it by singing some of her classic songs for everyone. What fun!

During the day I model and work in a
