Editorial

Dear Readers,

Welcome to F.M.I.'s new look. We have had a few staff changes, and the results speak for themselves. Tina Alameda is our new art director, and she's been in the business for more years than she'll admit.

We hope our fresh new look appeals to you regulars and to the rest of you who have not had the opportunity to get inside information on the world of female impersonation with all the facets of the transgendered sex culture that have been suppressed for too long. Our goal is to bring F.M.I. to a national newsstand magazine, making it readily available to everyone, not just a few big city adult bookstores. Those of you who cannot find F.M.I. anywhere, write to me. I will do my best to make sure you're on our mailing list for upcoming issues.

Once again I would like to thank you contributors of letters and pictures. Remember, as I stated before, this publication is for you—a means to communicate our lifestyles, thoughts, and fantasies with one another in the hopes of teaching and bringing understanding to all of those around us.

*Love,
Kim Christy*

The Powderkeg Cabarets'

Judmilla

“Is it man or woman . . . who knows for sure?” With this slogan the Powderkeg Cabaret has become world renowned. For years the glamorous transvestite shows have been revered, with International show stars dancing and singing on the Powderkeg’s tiny stage. With strict local building codes, no structure enlargement is feasable, but no matter, it is exactly this intimacy and closeness that has made the cabaret so popular, making the patrons feel special, as if a part of the show themselves.

Mary Laaf opens the show keeping everyone laughing in stitches night after night with her gags. This venerable comedienne has just celebrated her twenty fifth anniversary on the stage. She is a grand lady, yes, grand in the true sense of the word, exhibiting two hundred and twenty two pounds of “grandness.” She’s a gal not easy to miss, and one the cabaret fans will never tire of!

Whether Ludmilla sashay's on stage as a temperamental Mexican beauty, or as a member of a rare exotic species, she will appeal to everyone. Both men and women love her, she's one of the Powderkeg's top drawing attractions.

Gigi Ravel follows Ludmilla with a skit entitled "Turkish Girl On The Telephone," an hilarious send-up of language misunderstandings. In the second act Gigi's back yodeling in a dirndl dress that oftentimes flies up like Marilyn's famous scene in THE SEVEN YEAR ITCH.

The "number one rock grandma" France Delon (from Cologne) appears next. She's tall, slim and a knockout in her gorgeous gown. France sings our favorite songs with her own professional style and flair, a style expected of a cosmopolitan performer but not often found.

Hamburg's own "motormouth" Nadja Taylor follows next with her biting but frivolous humour, with Robby Diamond and Arno Bell finishing the solo acts for the evening, respectively. Robby, a masculine hunk, does his exciting "man striptease" with aplomb, and Arno utilizes his ventriloquist talents to expound on the humorous weaknesses of men who don't want to be men anymore.

The final act of the evening is the Mario Patino Revue, a dance fiesta that includes ballet, acrobatics, pantomime and the famous Can Can.

The Powderkeg's show is a sensation. If en route to Hamburg, Germany make sure to stop in and see one of the finest cabaret's in the world.

Letters to the Editor

If you wish to write to Kim and possibly have your correspondence published, please address it to Kim Christy, C/O FEMALE MIMICS INTERNATIONAL, P.O. BOX 1622, Studio City, CA 91604.

Dear Kim,

I am enclosing a photo in this letter in the hopes that I may update my personal ad.

Cross-dressing has been a passion of mine since I crawled into my parents' closet 24 years ago and made the aesthetic decision that mother's clothes were infinitely preferable to father's. I am just opening that closet door thanks to the gentle encouragement of my lover and the emotional support I get from reading magazines like yours. I was very pleased to read the last issue of F.M.I., Vol. 12, No. 5. For the first time I sensed that I had a palatable, sensitive, and intelligent magazine in my hands, and there was a feeling of pride in that. In your treatment of transvestism and transsexualism you create an aura of respectability that is very important to the self-image of your readers. I would almost expect to see F.M.I. on the shelves of any store, right next to Time and Newsweek. That is where it should be. If only that could be the case. It is so important that others realize that TVs and TSs have hearts and minds too. That is, of course, the dream we all entertain—that someday society will recognize and accept us as they are trying to accept the gay community. When that day comes, we will have ourselves, and especially people like you, to thank for it.

Imagine . . . a Pulitzer prize winning transvestite magazine!

Sincerely,
Jocelyn

Dear Jocelyn,

We strive very hard to bring quality and compassion to F.M.I. We are grateful to those who interpret our efforts like you have. You are also correct in the appeal for a newsstand look. This is my hope for the near future.

Thanks,
K.C.

Dear Kim,

I never thought that I would be writing you but I'm so excited I need something to burn some of it off. I thought writing you would help.

I'll start my story by saying that I've been cross-dressing since I was very young. I was never very tall and I've always been skinny and not popular in school.

Just after I started my freshman year this year I met my roommate Ken and we got an apartment together. Ken didn't know about my "closet activities" until just before Halloween.

He came in one day when I was getting "dressed." Of course he asked what I was doing and I told him I was thinking about going to a party dressed as a girl.

He looked at my hairy, nylon clad legs and asked "Think anybody will guess you aren't a girl?" We laughed but the conversation stayed on the subject and got serious. As it turned out Janet, the girl Ken is dating, is an acting major. Ken called her in regards to my "idea" and the wheels really started rolling.

By the time Halloween night came I was going to the big party in a most unusual outfit; a Geisha girl! And I mean I looked good! I had the tall black wig, the whitish makeup, kimono, panties, and a bra with falsies.

The party was really a blast. I started off dancing with guys but after unmasking when everyone found out I was a boy they voted me "Best Costume" and then no one much even talked to me. That is except for Vicki.

Vicki was a little shy but she came up and commented on how amazingly I had carried off my guise and how beautiful my costume was. We talked and had some drinks and went to her apartment and made love all night.

I really got interested in Vicki. She's 21 and a senior, an electrical engineering major already working for a computer firm here.

We had a whirl-wind romance and got married on December 31.

All the time we were dating she never mentioned the night we met and even avoided the subject. Also when we made love it was typical boy-girl stuff, nothing unusual.

Quickly, after we were married things changed. When we made love she started sucking on my nipples and feeling between my legs under my balls. My hair is shoulder length and she began spending a great deal of time brushing it before we made love.

Several weeks ago I was taking a shower. Vicki had the habit of putting my shorts on the dresser for me to put on when I got out. When I came out this night there was only a beige teddy there. I looked at her. She was busy putting the last couple of rollers in her hair. I wrapped my towel around my own wet hair and slipped into the teddy.

Getting into the teddy was pretty easy, you see Vicki is 5'8", 36-24-36 and 122 lbs., I'm 5'9", 37-29-33 and 125 lbs.

I walked over to her, she looked up at me and giggled "You're cute."

I replied, "Now that you got me in your underwear I'll bet you'd like to roll my hair also instead of just blowing and brushing it dry." Indeed she did and she did.

After she rolled my hair she put me under her old bonnet dryer and gave both of us a facial. Then without any warning while I was leaning back letting the masque dry she took out some spray Nair and started spreading that pink foam up and down my legs. I was really shocked and pleased. A few minutes later, she got a basin of water and a bucket and washed off all the foam leaving my smooth, gleaming legs to air dry.

She pulled off her masque then mine. Then she took out the blow dryer and quick dried her hair.

"Her nipples were standing out a mile. , ,

Then she put on some makeup, let down her hair, brushed it out and dried it some more and sprayed on some "Charlie" perfume, which I like.

Next she straddled me and made up my face. Then took me out from under the dryer and brushed out my hair. It fluffed out in loose curls just above my shoulders.

Neither of us had said a word. She pulled me out of the chair so I could see myself full length in the mirror. I could feel that nylon teddy all wet where my dick was folded between my legs, I looked good. As I stood looking at myself she dropped her robe revealing the same teddy I was wearing only in white. Her nipples were standing out a mile and it was sopping wet between the legs.

She walked up to me and gave me a big, passionate kiss, then stepped beside me so I could again see myself. She ran her hand under my teddy and began playing with my nipples which became hard and erect, trained from her sucking them. Needless to say we never had a better night of love making.

I never believed there were girls like this yet I ended up married to one.

We made love in a similar fashion for the next couple of weeks. I also began wearing nylons and garter belts, bras, beautiful lace panties, and even heels. And I've also worn some of her dresses during foreplay.

Last Saturday I came home from work (I sling hamburgers part-time) and she had a candlelight meal cooking. I knew something was up so I showered and shaved real good, (including my ass, she likes licking it when it's smooth) and came out to a surprise! Haynes panyhose, a padded girdle, a corselet with a built in waist cincher, and a pair of mastectomy breast forms. I got dressed and she fixed my hair up and put big beautiful earrings on me with her favorite necklace and put "Interlude" perfume on me. Then she went to the closet and pulled out a beautiful gown and a pair of silver sandals with 4 inch heels. The gown was pure white chiffon with a silver sequined bodice, empire waist line, billowing sleeves and sequined cuffs. She walked out as I got dressed. I looked at myself in the mirror and I never looked or felt more beautiful.

I floated out to the living room. She was in her wedding gown. She poured us a glass of champagne and handed one to me. She took a package of birth control pills from behind the champagne bucket, dropped one of the pills into her glass and then one into mine. She picked up her glass and held it up to toast mine, "To the brides," she said. I did too.

Kim, that night was too soft and too unbelievable to explain.

It's Monday now and Vicki and I have a dinner date. I'm going to meet her in a fancy restaurant, at the same table where we were engaged. Today I have a surprise for her. I've spent all day in the beauty parlor.

My hair is body permed, frosted, and cut into a page-boy with long feathered bangs. My eyebrows are newly shaped into beautiful arcs. My lashes are long and my make-up is immaculate. I've got silver studs in my newly pierced ears. My nails are inch long, red works of art. And my face, arms, legs, underarms, stomach, and butt are all waxed smooth.

I have on my special underwear, my breast forms, and I've taken my daily pill.

I'm wearing a red crepe dress with a v-neck and ruffled yokes front and back, suntan nylons, white sandals with 3½ inch heels, and I'm carrying a white clutch bag.

It's all been a dream, I'm afraid I'm gonna wake up and find out it's not true. I feel like I should be afraid to meet Vicki like this. I've never dressed like this before outside the privacy of our apartment. And even then not to this extent. Everytime I look at my hair or my eyes in the mirror, I nearly faint. I'll let you know how it went before I send this.

Gee, I hope I can drive a standard in these heels.

Well, I'm not working now but I'm still in school and turning heads!

You see after dinner Vicki and I went home, bagged up every piece of male clothes I owned and threw them in the dumpster. Then we went shopping for my "new look." Vicki thinks I'm the most beautiful creature on the Earth and wants me to stay that way.

By the way, my older brother Richard thinks that I'm beautiful too. Or at least that's what he told me when he thought that I was an old friend of Vicki's and tried to pick me up one night when we were out having drinks. He said he never forgets a beautiful face and that mine was familiar. Now I wouldn't doubt that.

Love always,

R.F.

PS, I wish this happens to all TV boys everywhere.

Kim, If you print this letter please withhold my address.

Please also send me a copy of the issue C.O.D. because I would really like to see this in print and if I ever get a copy of F.M.I. I never know how old it is.

Dear Rita,

You're so versatile and fun loving. Who would think you could have turned into the sweetheart of dragdom back there in Texas.

By the way, that's where "Sulka" got her start. Who knows, before too long you might be a star of the transgendered world!

Love ya,
K.C.

Dear Kim,

Please continue to maintain the high standards of Female Mimics International. Yours is my favorite TV publication. I recommend you clearly state in each issue how F.M.I. can be obtained by subscription since it is hard to find in bookstores. All one can find in adult bookstores these days are glossy, tasteless, photo displays that defeat the purpose of TVs.

Although it may be difficult to publish in a timely manner, would you consider having F.M.I. list places (with addresses and phone numbers) where female impersonator shows are appearing. I've never seen a real Female Mimics Revue and would travel all the way to Atlanta or Charlotte to see one if I could be sure of finding one. (South Carolina is pretty backwood.)

Do you know of a video cassette rental company or exchange club specializing in TV themes? Such cassettes generally cost about $80—$90 and seldom live up to my expectations.

Kim, could you suggest how I might rewrite my ad, #F-153. I've never received a reply. Either no women in the Southeast read the magazine or the ad is a real "turn-off."

Please continue as editor of this fine magazine.

Sincerely,
Bobbi

Dear Bobbi,

We are in the process of compiling a listing of where to go and what you'll see, so hang in there for that answer to your question.

And to all you female readers out there, how about dropping Bobbi a line, this could be just the person for you.

Happy hunting,
K.C.

He Sacrificed Everything

Robert Sylvester had it all—a prominent reputation, political power, a six-figure income. But he sacrificed everything, including a 10-year marriage, to become Susan Elizabeth Kimberly and find peace for the first time since early childhood.

For a time during the 1970s, Sylvester, 43, was a rising political star in St. Paul. As a city councilman, he became chairman of the Housing and Redevelopment Authority and chairman of the Finance Committee. He was elected council president.

Later, he left politics for investment banking. But all the while, Sylvester was repressing an insatiable desire to be a woman.

"I didn't mean to lie. I didn't mean to hurt anyone. But things weren't what they appeared to be," said Kimberly, who legally changed names March 28 and hopes perhaps to marry a man some day.

Although the sex-change operation has not yet taken place, Kimberly was "born" on Jan. 1, after a ceremony that friends described as a wake for the old Sylvester.

The man and his ex-wife, Mae, sent invitations to friends, including Mayor George Latimer, for a ceremony to "commemorate the departure of Bob Sylvester and the arrival of Susan Kimberly."

"It was very much like a (funeral) service in the feeling the people had," said Latimer. "Certain people would stand and testify to their love for Susan and Bob, their acceptance and prayers. I found it a moving, draining experience."

Sylvester began hormone treatments about a year ago and has undergone about 150 hours of electrolysis to remove facial hair. After a year of speaking, dressing and living exclusively as a woman, he will undergo surgery, at a cost of about $6,000. The entire sex change will carry a $35,000 price tag.

The man, who now works at a lesser paying job as a financial consultant, traced gender frustration back to early childhood.

"My major reaction from the time I was 6 was, 'God, no one will ever know'—and no one ever did," he recalled.

As a boy, he was careful to conceal cross-dressing episodes, venturing outside on a few occasions and only after dark.

"It wasn't a lot of fun," Kimberly recalled.

Later, at the University of Minnesota, he began researching transvestism.

In July 1968, Sylvester landed a job as editor of a small-town Minnesota newspaper. The next spring, he met Mae Seely.

He told her he was a transvestite, a man who enjoys wearing women's clothing. He later learned he was also a transsexual, a person who identifies psychologically with the opposite sex.

"At first, Mae tried to help me," he said.

In 1970, he consulted a psychiatrist.

"He acted like it was just like quitting smoking, and he told me to just quit," Kimberly said. "So I had a ritual wardrobe burning, and just quit. He also agreed that getting married was a fine idea."

Sylvester and Ms. Seely were married in July 1972.

Late in 1977, Sylvester sought professional help again, and finally told his female therapist, "I want to be a girl."

"And she said, 'Well, then, why don't you get on with it?'" he recalled.

"I didn't mean to lie. I didn't meant to hurt anyone. But things weren't what they appeared to be."

He began going out in public in women's clothes in 1978. But keeping two personalities separate was difficult, so he installed a separate phone with an unlisted number "so that when the phone rang, I'd know who I was supposed to be."

"I started to put together what turned out to be the perfect, 14-year-old girl's bedroom," he added.

It included pink flounce curtains, flowered wallpaper, French Provincial furniture, Hollywood makeup lights, stuffed toys, dolls, a Princess telephone and a canopied bed.

In January 1980, he made the decision to switch sexes. He and his wife, who had no children, divorced in 1981.

So far, he said, the trauma of preparing for the sex change has been worthwhile.

"I think the important event for me personally was when I came to terms with having been Bob Sylvester. I had really felt he was insensitive and harsh and hypercritical.

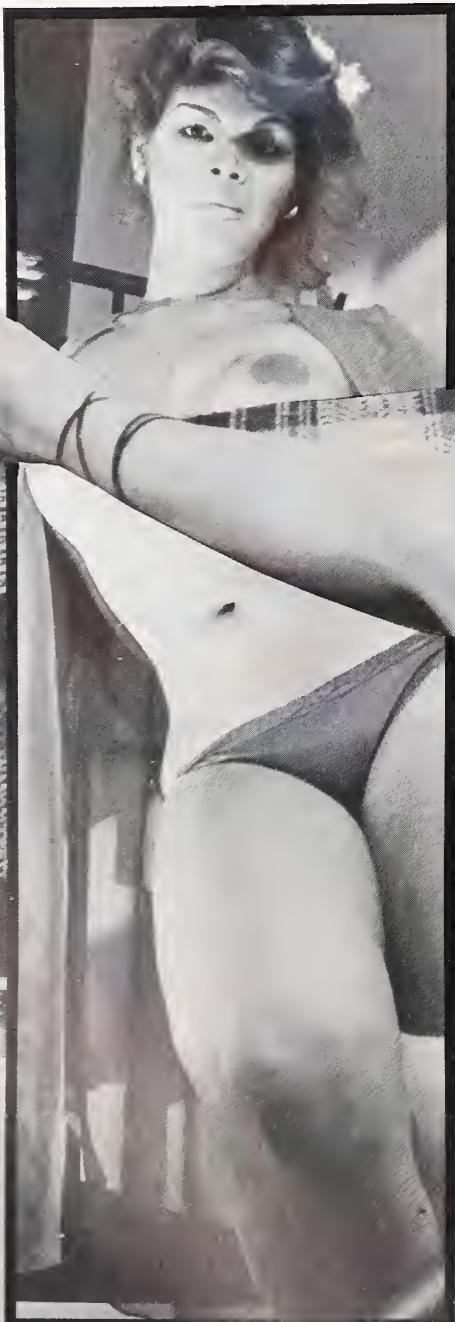

"But as the year closed, I saw that he had done some pretty important things. And the way people were being so helpful, he must have been a pretty nice person."

He added that as a woman. "I would like to have a sexually intimate relationship—I am looking forward to that. If I didn't think sex was important, everything I'm doing would be just plain foolish."

Trained By Aunty

Sarah was feeling happy that day. She was a governor at the Stoughton Centre and from Monday to Fridays helped look after, and care for, the inmates, who were mostly young folk in their late teens who had come from broken homes or were orphans. It was easy to understand why she was so happy on this particular day, a handsome young man had attracted her fancy, and Paul, for that was his name, was a very shy youth who had only arrived at her centre a few days ago after being transferred from a similar home which had been gutted by fire.

Sarah Wilson was in her late thirties, some twenty years older than Paul and yet she was very attracted to him, not only because of his strikingly good looks but because of his obvious shyness and passivity. Since she had been widowed some four years ago she had been looking for a new partner, and from the first day she started working at the Centre two years ago she had found herself drawn towards males much younger than herself. She enjoyed the thought of all those young males full of youth and vitality, with a certain freshness about them on the threshold of manhood, most of whom were discovering their sexual awareness.

Most of them had spent years "in care," away from normal family life, and this of course was why they were naive and ill-informed on worldly matters, particularly those appertaining to sexuality.

After four years of sexual abstinence Mrs. Wilson was eager for new adventures. She liked submissive men and Paul seemed the ideal person to satisfy her strong sexual needs. He was young, he was good looking although in a way rather effeminate, and most important of all, he was a passive, pliable person. From his records she learnt he had had a strict upbringing in various orphanages, and she knew this meant he had not experienced any sexual gratification with the opposite sex, and must be a complete male-virgin. With his innocence and growing sexual awareness he would be just right to mold into the type of lover Sarah wanted and desired so badly. She would be able to dominate him, introduce him to the special style of sex she liked, and eventually make him her compliant little sex slave and pet.

It was obvious she would have to work on him in the privacy of her own home to mold him exactly as she wanted him, but this would not be a problem for at weekends most of the inmates were farmed out to foster homes and many of the staff took home selected orphans to their own homes. This was encouraged by the authorities as it gave the unfortunate inmates a chance to sample normal family life and to see the outside world before they finally had to leave the safety and protection of the orphanage. It would be a simple matter for Sarah to arrange to look after Paul at weekends, and during the time he spent with her in her own home she would be able to seduce him and introduce him to her kind of sex. She would back this up by giving him special attention during the week when she was working at the Centre, but she would have to be extremely careful so the suspicions of the rest of the staff would not be aroused.

Paul was new to the Stoughton Orphanage and being such a shy youth found it difficult to make friends and get to know the new faces around him. This made him all the more receptive for the attention he was getting from Mrs. Wilson. He began to really believe this older woman understood his shyness and his problem of making friends. Over the next few months he was developing an unusual friendship with the quite attractive governor, but Sarah was too worldly-wise to rush things and not once did she mention sex or encourage him in any way. However, she was delighted to see how interested he was in her figure, and many times she caught him making surreptitious glances in her direction when he thought she wasn't looking.

Eventually Sarah decided to put her plan into operation, and spoke to Paul one day about the weekends. "You would like to stay with me one weekend, wouldn't you Paul?"

"Oh yes, yes I would Mrs. Wilson." She saw how very excited he was already at the prospect.

"Well, Paul, you must promise to be a very good boy and do everything you are told. Remember these weekends away from the Home are special treats only allowed to those who have deserved them. You do understand that, don't you?"

"Yes Miss, I promise I will be good and I'll do exactly what you say. Please, Mrs. Wilson, do take me with you."

Wonderful, thought Sarah to herself, he knows if he is disobedient to me I can report him and as well as losing his weekend privileges he would be given very bad marks by the Chief of Staff and this would go against him when it was time for him to take a reference into the outside world. The correct relationship between her and Paul had been established, right from the start, he would have to do everything he was told, or suffer the consequences.

"We will make it next weekend," she told him, finding it difficult to control her own emotions.

"Oh, thank you ever so much, Miss. I really will be looking forward to that. I wish it was Friday now."

It seemed that Friday would never come, but when it did both Mrs. Wilson and Paul were excited and apprehensive for their own reasons. Paul had packed a small suitcase with clothes and his washing things the night before, and was ready at four o'clock sharp to join Sarah in the entrance hall. "I'm all ready, Mrs. Wilson," he beamed. She smiled at him. He looked even more handsome, and in a strange way passively feminine, when he smiled so happily.

She ushered him into her car for the drive to her home, which was about ten miles away. She liked the way he kept staring at her legs while they drove along, and the glazed look in his eyes told her how fascinated he was by her body. This fascination would make it so easy during the next few weeks for her to encourage him to do what she wanted. He would be given his own gratification but not in the way he would normally expect, and he would learn that he would have to pay special homage to his goddess to earn that gratification.

They spent a quiet evening together watching the television, and on several occasions when sitting down on the sofa she sat carelessly and allowed her dress to ride up quite high on her thighs. She pretended not to notice this fact, or his hungry stare at her nylon sheathed legs and black panties she was wearing beneath her frock. Sarah was pleased with his reaction for she wanted to concentrate his sexual interest on her thighs and underwear.

When it was time for him to go to bed he felt very excited from the numerous views of this woman's legs he had been allowed, but further excitement was in store for him when Sarah came up to his room to say goodnight. She sat on the edge of his bed near to his pillow and Paul was afforded yet another view of her womanly thighs and the black nylon panty-crotch. After talking to him softly for a moment or so she kissed him lightly on the forehead and wished him a pleasant sleep.

The young man was in a state of bliss after recovering from that kiss from his goddess, and then, together with the entralling sights he had seen he found it very difficult to get to sleep.

In her own bedroom an equally excited Sarah found rest hard to come by and gently frigged herself to a pleasant climax to relieve her tensions, but she vowed that she would make sure it wouldn't be too long before the good looking young man in the guest bedroom would be looking after her sexual needs and then she would not have to resort to masturbating herself.

In the morning Sarah made a cup of tea for them both and brought the tray with the two cups into his bedroom. As she sat the tray down on the table beside the bed her satin dressing-gown parted enough for him to be afforded a sight of her shapely legs through the layers of transparent pink nylon of the nighty she was wearing. Then, as she sat down on the edge of the bed beside him to hand him his cup of tea and then drink her own, her scantily clad legs were but a few inches from his face. He was still sleepy and hardly awake but he could detect her feminine odor and he found he was becoming aroused by her close proximity. His youthful cock started to throb and push against the bedsheets, but Sarah pretended not to notice his erection, or his flushed face.

"Did you sleep well, Paul dear?" she asked in a motherly tone.

"Er . . . oh . . . yes. Yes thank you, Miss," he was more than a little befuddled.

"Good, it's such a nice day I think we will drive down to the coast and have a swim, shall we? Get yourself ready and dressed and come down for breakfast as soon as you can, dear."

After a quick breakfast they were soon speeding on their way to the sea. He was so looking forward to this treat which made such a change from the humdrum life at the Centre. While they drove, Sarah kept looking at his good looking face. "Tonight," she vowed to herself, "I will start his training. I cannot wait any longer. The prospects are too good."

That night Sarah again went to his bedroom and sat close to him, knowing that he would be able to smell her femininity as well as have a close view of her legs. She saw the bulge beneath the sheets, he was getting erect again, just as he had done on the first night. She spoke softly to him, "Did you enjoy your day out at the sea with me, Paul?"

"Oh yes, Miss, very much."

She moved so that her right thigh was pressed against his face as she shuffled her legs on the bed and he half turned towards her. "Are you feeling comfortable, dear?" and at the same time as she spoke to him she slid one hand beneath the sheets.

"Er . . . yes . . . yes Miss, I think so," he stammered, then he held his breath when he felt her fingers under the sheets actually touching his aroused penis.

"You are not COMPLETELY comfortable, are you pet?" she still spoke softly, motherly to him and gripped his cock more firmly.

"Er . . . er . . . I . . . I . . . don't . . . know."

"Don't be embarrassed, Paul dear," she comforted him, "it is only natural for young men like you to get hard and excited like this."

He watched her get up from the bed. She was smiling down at his scarlet-embarrassed face. "I know what to do pet, but first you must close your eyes a minute." When he had closed his eyes she quickly took off her knickers and then knelt on the bed with a knee on either side of his head. Then she pushed her warm panties beneath the sheets and deftly wrapped them around his rigid penis stem.

Paul detected her female fragrance more strongly than ever before because she was not wearing knickers now, and because she was closer to his face, and at the same time he revelled in the delicious silky feel of her panties on his blood-gorged cock. This was surely heaven, he thought.

Sarah then began a slow, methodical rhythm of wanking him, and was pleased to see him lying back passively on his pillow with his eyes still closed, and a smile of contentment on his face.

"That's right, my darling boy, just lay back and enjoy it. You let me make you nice and happy . . . nice and happy . . . nice . . . and . . . happy . . . nice . . . and . . . happy darling," she whispered in his ear, and at the same time stroked his forehead with her other hand.

Quite soon she detected that he was approaching his climax. She offered him her hand for him to grip on and whispered softly to him, "Nice silky knickers, Paul, nice silky panties darling boy . . . silky panties . . . lovely silky panties . . . silky . . . panties. Now you keep saying it, pet, silky panties . . . go on . . . silky panties."

"Nice silky . . . panties . . . silky panties . . . nice silky panties," he repeated time and time again, his voice becoming more tremulous as his orgasm came closer to fulfillment. When he was babbling the words excitedly she gripped his cock very tightly and wanked him with fast, determined strokes. He gasped for breath but somehow kept mumbling the words "nice silky panties" all through his climax as he fiercely ejaculated into her knickers which she held so firmly over the crown of his cock. Once she felt him spend she slowed down the actioning but still kept up a slow wank for a while longer until she was sure her panties had accepted all he had to give, and then bending forward she kissed him full on his lips with a passion he would never have experienced. He returned the kiss though with equal strength and threw his arms round her neck. He felt he was on cloud nine to be kissing this beautiful woman he had always adored and admired so much, and for her to be holding his prick in the wet, soft folds of her warm panties.

She broke the kiss and looked into his happy face.

"Now we are SPECIAL friends, Paul, we can't have you calling me Mrs. Wilson can we, or Miss, from now on you will call me 'Aunty' do you understand dear? That's so much nicer now we are friends."

"Oh, yes, I agree . . . Aunty," he replied, obviously delighted to be on such friendly terms with this woman.

"You must promise me one thing, Paul, pet, you must never tell anyone at the Centre about our friendship or we shall cease being friends at all. You understand, Paul, dear?"

"Oh yes, I promise, I promise with my hand on my heart . . . Aunty . . . ohaaaaaoo."

She was wiping him clean with her soiled knickers and her fingernail caught the rim of his sensitive knob. She kissed him lightly on the cheek and told him to sleep well. "You will sleep better now you have had your tensions eased away with Aunty's panties," she told him.

"Goodnight, Aunty . . . and thank you."

Our Own Linda Lee

Well, rats!

Here I thought I'd come up with a foolproof method for getting out of writing a column this time around which I don't have time to do. (I wish I knew what radar Kim uses to tell when I am absolutely at my busiest so she can call with a request for ". . . a few pages right away . . .").

"Why don't we," I'd said to Kim when the last request came "fill the space with pictures. After all I'll be in L.A. for a few days; we need pictures for the head of the column anyhow, so why don't we just do a whole session."

"Well," said Kim, "you'd have to write a commentary on the pictures."

"Sure," I said, envisioning a line or two under each shot. "I should be able to do that in about a day and get right back to you."

Kim seemed to like the idea and we did it and, for a while everything was lovely in the garden, as the saying goes. Then I got the proofs and called Kim to see how many lines she wanted. "About ten pages," she said.

"Ulp." I said.

Anyway, here it is and I refuse to take all the blame if it sounds like "What I Did On My Summer Vacation" . . .

After Kim agreed to the project, I went to pack.

Needless to say my suitcase was about twice as heavy as it would otherwise have been. After all, I was going to be a model!

After I arrived, we set an actual day for the shooting. It was Tuesday when I talked to Kim and we picked Thursday for the big event.

For a while it looked like we might shoot at a location, but that didn't work out, so we were left with a studio session.

I confess I would have preferred the location since I'm lots more comfortable with a house and yard than I am with acres of seamless paper, but what the heck, I was going to be a model!

The next day came a slight jolt. Kim called. Something on her schedule had been overlooked. We could do the session on Thursday as scheduled but, if we did, Kim would have to drop me at the studio and leave me in the hands of the photographer.

Well, I'd rather be in Kim's hands any day (You can take that any way you like, Kim . . .) and didn't relish the idea of working with someone I'd never met. So . . . we reset the shooting for Friday morning when Kim's schedule was clear.

It seemed a long wait, but I kept busy in the meantime.

One evening I took my friend Liz and her fiance up to the Magic Castle.

Liz looked absolutely gorgeous. A few months back she was in Colorado giving moral support to a friend who was having her surgery. The friend had implants. Liz took one look and buttonholed Dr. Biber there and made arrangements to have implants too, while she was there.

Or, as she put it "I was in the neighborhood so I thought I'd pick up some new tits . . ." (As you can probably tell, her sense of humor is one of the reasons I like Liz so much).

It seemed to work out well for her. As I walked along beside her at the Magic Castle I cooled off in the breeze from the heads that turned as she passed. Her fiance seemed very proud, as well he might have been.

Finally Friday morning arrived. I bathed, "Naired," and generally got ready. I packed my clothes in an American Airlines soft-side case and threw in my make-up as well. I didn't really do any before I left since Kim always changes it anyhow . . . she can get it lots better for pictures than I can. So I pulled on a tee-shirt and my Calvin Kleins and drove to the office.

Kim was there and about ready to go. We paused just long enough to pick up a few copies of #15 which had just come off the presses a few days earlier and which I hadn't seen, and then we were on our way.

I followed her in my car, as she wasn't going to be coming back to the office. This in itself was a neat trick in the Los Angeles traffic, and more than once I had visions of wandering lost and helpless looking for a photographer whose name I didn't know at a location I'd never been to.

However the Goddess of Internal Combustion Vehicles was smiling on me and I managed to catch up to Kim each time I lost her.

After we arrived at the studio I met the photographer who seemed, from his accent, to be European. Just to be on the safe side I'll guess Swiss . . . "that way we don't offend anybody . . ."

The photographer was certainly no amateur as witnessed by the Gold Record for an album cover he had done.

I was sent back to the make-up room to get ready while Kim and the photographer talked.

I emerged fifteen minutes or so later only to be told I needed more blusher and more lipstick which Kim applied (see . . . I told you it always needed changing . . .)!

That done, we now considered what to wear. I unpacked my bag, which holds an incredible amount, and spread out the swag. It looked like the bargain basement at Macy's. I literally brought a little of everything from businesslike skirt, blouse and blazer combinations to lingerie and an evening gown since I had no idea what Kim would want to do.

Kim decided to shoot with the evening gown first. I have to admit being glad to get some use out of it. I had, a few years back, done a nine-week "gig" (as we in "show-biz" say . . .) at a large shopping mall. This gown and one other from the same company (Funky) turned up in the window mannequin during that time and I fell for them and had spent a substantial amount of those weeks' pay buying them.

It was only later that the tiny voice inside me made itself heard . . . "But you're almost never in a situation to wear an evening gown . . ." Actually, the inner voice had some other, rather uncomplimentary things to say about my mental processes and general gullibility, but we won't go into that!

Anyhow, I was pleased to be able to take the evening gown off the hanger, though looking at the proofs I'd say there are one or two shots where it would have looked better if it stayed on the hanger.

It was at this point I discovered our first real problem. You observant readers may have noticed that all the full-length shots feature the "sensuous bare-foot look." This is because I forgot both pairs of shoes that I'd planned to bring. The only ones I had with me were the ones I'd worn to the office, a pair of Candies tennie flats . . . not much good with the evening gowns unless I wanted a comedy effect! (And in any of these shots where there is a comedy effect, it's unintentional).

So, most of these shots aren't full length. I'm a little sorry for this since I had a pair of silver high-heel sandals that I think would have looked very sharp with the dress.

Since I don't know which of the color shots we'll be using I should tell you that the dress is a warm burgundy color. Actually I have a pair of shoes to match (when I get a stupid notion, I don't stop half-way . . .) but since they wouldn't have gone with anything else I brought and I only had limited space, I chose the silver which I felt would go with most dressy things.

So we started shooting. What we wanted here, Kim said, was a sort of "Helen Gurly Brown" look.

I don't know whether we actually achieved it, but I did feel an overwhelming urge to run out and edit the current issue of COSMOPOLITAN.

Apart from this, Kim stayed mostly in the background and left me working with the photographer.

This was a little scare. Just before we started I noticed on his table the Los Angeles and New York photo books from Elite Models, one of the "Big Three" American modeling agencies along with Eileen Ford and Wilhelmina.

After seeing the books I'd already begun to worry. If that was the sort of model he was used to, he'd probably find me much like trying to take sensuous glamor shots of C-3PO. It didn't help my nerves at all.

And I found it was harder working with someone I didn't know than with Kim who I've known for several years and trust completely. It was harder to relax and, consequently harder to "give" to the camera. It was also hard to hear what the photographer was saying. Like many nearsighted people, I find it harder to hear with my glasses off, which they were for most of the session.

If I'd realized just how the shooting was going to be set up I would have made a point of sitting down with the photographer and with Kim to talk about what they wanted and what I could do to best help them achieve it (apart, I mean, from looking like Bo Derek . . . it's already too late for that . . .). I don't know doing this would have helped them any, but I think it would have made me less nervous.

Next we did the shots in the negligee and robe. This is one of the most beautiful outfits of this sort I've ever seen and, again, I was glad to have the pictures in it because I'd hardly ever worn it. After all, it's not the sort of thing for everyday wear so I'd only used it once (for a Very Special Person . . .).

In this outfit we did some full length shots since bare feet are perfectly appropriate. The robe moves gracefully and I think the effect was pretty. I also really like the shot in this outfit where I'm lying down because I don't look like I'm all teeth, gums and nose as I often do with a "mouth open" smile.

Then we changed backgrounds and did the shots in the skirt and blouse. We had to, as the blouse was moderately close in color to the background we'd used up to then, a peach color more or less.

This outfit was the most comfortable for me to work in because it is very close to the kind of thing I'm likely to wear to look a little dressy.

I was also wearing my glasses for more of these shots than any of the others and that made me more comfortable as well. It's amazing how much more at ease one feels when everything isn't a total blur. (Ummm, thinking about it for a second, perhaps it isn't all that amazing, really . . .).

The last pictures we shot were the ones sitting in the chair. As I was changing out of the skirt and blouse, Kim asked me if there was anything else I especially wanted to have pictures in.

"I'd like to have a few in this," I replied, holding up what I think of as my HAMLET shirt—a heavy cotton shirt with very full sleeves, a wide collar and a "V" neck.

"What would you wear with it?" Kim asked.

"Let's see, I could wear this skirt, or the white jeans, or the Calvin Kleins . . ."

"Hmmmm . . ."

"Or," I said in a moment of reckless abandon, "I wouldn't have to wear anything with it at all . . ."

"Yes!" said the photographer. "That could work. I could put her in this chair . . ." and he set about moving the seamless paper out of the way.

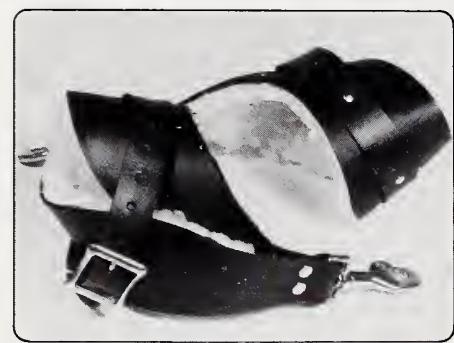

"We'll try it," Kim said.

We did, and all things considered I think these shots came out pretty well. It was a little easier for me not (continued on page 46) to have to move so much as I avoided the dual pitfalls of being to static or moving so much I'd go out of focus. By now, too, I was more relaxed about the situation. Usually the best shots in a session come at the end for this reason. I don't know that these were the best, but they're sort of nice.

"So," said the photographer when we'd finished those "Do you want to do anything else?"

"Four outfits ought to do." said Kim.

"How about the high-heels and leather stuff?" asked the photographer.

"She's not that kind of girl," Kim replied.

"Want to do some topless shots?" the photographer suggested.

"If you take pictures of me," I answered "that's what you'll get, all right." (Actually, having seen the proofs, now I'm a little sorry I didn't do a few, just to see how they'd come out . . . after all the studio lighting almost gave me the illusion of three dimensions . .).

So we decided we were finished and I started to pack up and put my jeans and tee shirt on.

We finished up and went our separate ways. I headed back to my parents' house with a brief stop to see a friend. Kim headed on to finish her day and the photographer rolled up the seamless paper for the afternoon.

Well . . . I'd done it. I'd been a model. And let me tell you it left me with a healthy respect for the women and men who do it professionally. It seems so simple. You just stand up there and let them take your picture, right? Wrong. You have to give, give, give to the camera, and the person behind it may well be someone you've never seen before, never heard of. But to really get good pictures you have to treat the photographer and camera like they were old friends, boon companions, lovers.

Whew! No wonder it's harder than it looks!

But at least I'd done it. I may not have been terribly good but I stuck it out no matter how nervous I was.

Then I started to experience what a lot of beginning models must experience. I started worrying about how the pictures came out.

I have a strange face. Mostly it's my nose. Sometimes it can look just fine. The shots that we ran with my last column, which were taken by my special friend Kelly, were like that. My nose looked very much in proportion. Those were my favorite pictures in a long time.

On the other hand sometimes the light, the angle, my hairstyle, and perhaps the phase of the moon, can make my nose look approximately the size of the Chrysler building. I can never tell which it's going to be.

So I worried until the proofs got here. They were only Xerox copies, but they seem to be generally all right "nose-wise." I hope so, at any rate. (One of these days I may have to do something about that nose).

In the meantime, though, I'm nearly out of space. Thanks to Kim for letting me do the pictures. Thanks to the photographer for doing his best to make me look good, and most of all thanks to you for reading. That, after all, is why this column keeps showing up more or less regularly.

Remember, I'm always anxious to hear news of interest to the transgendered community. You can reach me c/o Ozma Productions, P.O. Box 23001, Oakland, California 94623.

Thank you all again.
