The Original Magazine For Men Who Enjoy Dressing Like Women!

Editorial

Darlings,

The spirit of Christmas is upon me and I must tell you all how grateful I am to have this magazine to help you and myself towards better self-understanding. Don't let me fool you for a minute, the ultimate goal of any magazine publisher is to make money. It would be foolish not to. But, the side product, and the reason that I look forward to my mail each day is that I get out of myself long enough to think of someone else (for a change).

It would be denial to believe that as a group, we are generally happy and well put together. There is nothing wrong with putting on a dress, but the reasons many of us came to this life-style are less than pleasant. Many of us are saddled with confusion and guilt. I have worked hard to make my life productive and positive for both myself and my family. It is human nature to be self-centered and self-obsessed. I battle it all the time. I find relief from these obsessions and a feeling of usefulness in doing my magazine work and in my spiritual values.

If anyone out there suffers from depression or self-pity, get into action. Put the focus on someone else and get out of your self. There are so many ways to do this and you'd be surprised how much fun and gratification you can get out of it. Think about this when you answer the personal ads. What can you bring to the person whose ads you are replying to? Your experience? Your care?

My experience is that the people who read this magazine are sensitive and caring individuals. People have cared for me and loved me through these pages when my life was less than lovely and it has meant a great deal to me.

*Love to you all,
Kim Christy*

Letters to the Editor

If you wish to write to Kim and possibly have your correspondence published, please address it to Kim Christy, C/O FEMALE MIMICS INTERNATIONAL, P.O. BOX 1622, Studio City, CA 91604.

Hi Kim!

I'm writing to tell you how much I adore "Female Mimics International."

Every two months I get in my car and rush into Chicago to find a bookstore that has your wonderful magazine. Unfortunately, FMI is hard to find. But worth the effort!

Although I'm only 22 years old, I've been dressing as a girl since high school. I'm lucky to have very little facial hair, a body which looks feminine with minimal padding, and a girlish face.

My only problem . . . if it is a problem — is that I am very well-hung. I find it difficult to wear anything that lets my genitals show.

I don't want to get into bragging, so enough.

About your magazine. The features are superb. So are the letters. I've particularly enjoyed the letters from "Pam," "Melissa," "Rachael," and "Karla" in issues this year.

I believe you're performing a terrific service to all TV's and TS's. At last, a forum for our wants and needs!

Enclosed find a photo of me in a wig a friend styled for me. I'm particularly proud of the way my makeup came out. My friend used her own cosmetics on my face.

Tell your readers that's the best way to achieve femininity — have a real woman help you.

Carol

Keep up the good work! I'd like to ask a question before I say goodbye.

How do you feel about trans-vestites (like you and me) getting married? I believe you said you were married in F.M.I. last year.

Should I marry a woman? What are the chances of a TV finding happiness in a hetero relationship? Or of — you should excuse the expression — of "fathering" a child? I'd sort of like to be a "daddy" in a dress.

I'm reserving a copy of the '86 "She-Male" Calendar.

Best wishes,
Carol

Darling,

The chances of a successful relationship with another is directly proportionate to the success of our relationship with God and ourselves.

Good luck.

K.C.

Re: Vol. 15 No. 2, #28

Many thanks for reprinting the Tribune article on my shop. I have had some response from your readers and do appreciate it. Both my models were very excited about their pictures appearing in your well-known magazine. Both models are professional entertainers — Alana is a featured performer at the Baton Show Lounge in Chicago and Candi free-lances extensively around the country. Thank you again.

Staara

Dear Kim,

I'm a newcomer to cross-dressing, although I've fantasized about being a woman ever since I can remember, and it does "feel wonderful inside" just as you put it.

One of the things I wanted to say to you is that I think you're one of the most stunning-looking women in the entire world. I mean ever! No kidding. Period.

Kathy

The other thing, Kim, was to ask you for a little direction. While I have no illusions about being a star, I would like to be “famous for fifteen minutes” doing a porn film. The problem is: I don’t have the slightest idea where to begin. That’s where I hoped you might have a suggestion or two.

Since the field is teeming with gorgeous girls (preferably with the capacity for erections), I should mention that I am pretty lucky on this score. Fortunately enough, I’ve got a cock that can stay hard “for months” — and it better not ever think of shrinking!

Like yourself, Kim, I’m on pretty good terms with reality, so if there’s no way you can give me advice about this, I’ll understand. I just don’t want to go through life without at least trying.

In any event, I want to wish you and the magazine (top of line) continued success. Thanks for listening.

Lots of warm feelings,
Kathy

“I would like to be ‘famous for fifteen minutes’.”

Kathy,

This is an area I really have to stay out of. But, best of luck and tell us of your progress.

*Love,
Kim*

Dear Kim,

Just picked up #29 last night, and I’m still quivering!

It’s the second F.M.I. I’ve seen and I’m hooked! I love the shot of you in the black low-cut (what gorgeous nails).

I am, alas, still closeted. I’d love to dress up totally, but here in the midwest, it’s tough. So, for now, I’ll go on envying girls like “Laura” (P.S. Laura — you’re beautiful) who are actively trying the life style to the hilt. I praise her for candidness and just plain joy of dressing as a lady. You’re right — she’s too critical!

As for Michelle — WOW! I’ve never seen anything quite like her — perfect eyes, breasts, skin, legs, hair! Wow!!

Kim — could you please write more about the technical aspects of dressing up? Where do the girls get shoes? Also, I’m tall (6’2”). Any special tips for us tall (but trying) TV’s?

I’m relieved to see a “balanced” view of this life style — (not porno) and high-quality of pix and editorial content. I’m going to order a stack of back-issues. I’m sorry I’ve missed all the pretty past ones but hope there’s more to come.

I can’t send you a photo (yet) since I’m not accomplished at make-up and don’t have many clothes. Maybe in the future you’ll hear from (and see) me as I’d love to appear.

By the way — isn’t it funny what each of us finds sexy? For instance, in issue 29, the photo page 15 upper right I find unbearably sexy — why? Because of the shoes (and the hose) of the model on the left. I'd love to have feet and shoes that look like hers!! Someday, Kim!!

That's all for now — love you and F.M.I.!!

Yours,
Jaye-Jaye

Dear,
Thanks for the bright and chatty letter.

Best,
Kim

Dear Mistress Kim:

I have been one of your most devoted admirers for many years since first seeing your picture in a magazine.

I, like most of your admirers, have certain fetishes. I would be very grateful for the privilege of receiving a picture of you as described below:

Starting with your FEET. You have on a pair of HIGH SPIKED-HEEL STILLETTO BLACK PATENT LEATHER PUMPS or BLACK PATENT THIGH LENGTH BOOTS. These shoes do not have a platform type HEEL and have HEELS of at least 5 inches high.

Your beautiful legs are covered with BLACK SEAMLESS STOCKINGS. These have DARK TOPS and are held up by GARTER STRAPS with at least 4 GARTERS per LEG.

Next we go to your ARMS and HANDS. You have on a pair of LONG BLACK GLOVES that are made of PATENT LEATHER, PLAIN LEATHER, SATIN or even COTTON and they may or may not cover your VERY LONG FINGER NAILS that are SHARP, POINTED and PAINTED BRIGHT WET RED. Your FINGERS are adorned with RINGS and on your ARMS and WRIST you have LARGE BRACELETS of DIAMOND or LEATHER.

We next look to your MOST LOVELY FACE and HAIR. Your HAIR is long, past your shoulders. Its STYLE could be a simple PONY TAIL, a very stylish BEEHIVE, a GLAMOUR GIRL or any other style that you feel appropriate. Your EYES have the longest UPPER and LOWER LASHES coated with BLACK MASCARA. Your EYELIDS are covered with a BLUE METALLIC EYE SHADOW. On your LIPS we find LIPSTICK that matches your FINGERNAIL POLISH that is a BRIGHT WET RED. Your EARS have VERY LONG and LARGE DIAMOND EARRINGS that dangle and almost touch your shoulders. On your NECK is a LARGE NECKLACE of DIAMOND or LEATHER.

As for your BODY it can be covered or bare. If covered you have on a BLACK BRA and GARTER BELT, WAISTCINCHER or a LONG BLACK CORSET. Your PANTIES are BLACK SATIN. If you are ready to go out for a NIGHT of DINNER and DANCING you have on a VERY SHORT BLACK SKIRT that is CUSTOM MADE to your body and is very TIGHT and SLIT up the SIDES. It is made of leather, or a material that is very GLITTERY with SPARKLE, or of a SATIN material; when seated it exposes the TOP of your STOCKING. Your top is also BLACK, very low cut and of a similar or complimentary material and your VERY LARGE BREASTS are straining to be seen by all.

To top off the most BEAUTIFUL MISTRESS IN THE WORLD you have a CIGARETTE INSERTED in a HOLDER that is 4 to 6 inches long.

I think BLACK makes a WOMAN look the most DESIRABLE, DARLING and totally in command, but if you prefer RED, BLUE, SILVER or the color of your choice could be used; after all you are in command and it is only my humble request of you to allow me some small pleasure that will make this possible.

I wish that I could find SOMEONE who looked like my FANTASY or that I could look like that.

I would like to know where a picture of you as described above can be found. I have many with some of the above but none with all.

Your devoted loving servant,
Jayne

P.S. I wish that someday I may meet the woman who shall LOVE me as HER SISTER and LOVER. Your magazine has by far the MOST BEAUTIFUL REAL FEMALE WOMEN and SHE-MALE WOMEN TO BE FOUND. Keep up the great work.

You may use this letter in any of your publications but do not use the address. I will try and send you some pictures of the past 10 years of my life. I must find the negatives to have copies made. It has taken years to put my FANTASY down. I wonder if it ever will be a realization.

Again your loving servant,
Jayne

Dear Kim:

I've been a fan of yours for quite some time now, having first seen you in an issue of Female Mimics with "Chrysis." I think the magazine is just wonderful and I wish you continued success. As for myself, I've been practicing the art since I was very young and still continue to enjoy it. I have enclosed a couple of pictures, the ones with the long hair were taken about ten years ago and the one with short hair taken this year. I hope I'm improving with age. you have my permission to publish them if you wish. Keep up the good work.

Darling,

Thanks for the many looks of Lisa. Keep in touch.

Kim

Dear Kim,

I am in the unenviable position of being a TV married to an unsympathizing wife. I also have a job where exposure could ruin every thing I've achieved. However, I've still considered leaving it all behind and starting over. But the big obstacle here is the inability to know that I could pass along with being able to make a living. My background is in computers so the latter concern doesn't weigh as heavily as the former.

Your magazine is a source of constant reinforcement that not only are there others like me but they are also beautiful people. Your letters to the editor section is the first thing I read each month. I doubt I could ever be as glamorous as you or your centerfolds but your readers are an inspiration to all of us with a "woman inside."

Love,
Kris

Dear Kris,

Thanks for the good words. I hope that all the readers of F.M.I. understand that the models we expose here are the exception to the rules. Every "woman" is beautiful in her own way.

Love,
Kim

Dear Kim,

Rhonda's back from her Dallas dalliance. Few people noticed the pretty girl in a smart blue polyester travel dress deplane into the hot Dallas twilight.

But Rhonda's friend, Nichol was waiting — "long-time-no-see hugs" and off we went in Nichol's new Cadillac.

Somehow I'd arrived in time for the two of us to use Nichol's engraved invitation to the private opening party of a posh new disco in Dallas. We got dolled up and had a ball, free champagne, and the only two girls there. We danced our legs off.

Lisa

For the next week or so we were seen at the other Dallas nightspots. Unfortunately the "in" club there is a seedy little dive with raw concrete dance floors — something right out of a Coors beer commercial. But all the smart girls in their Neiman Marcus originals were there to be "seen." Strangely enough, none of the boys wanted to play footsie with Rhonda. Must be the dress.

One thing that makes Dallas (in)famous is Nichol's huge mirror canopy bed. The mirror alone weighs 250 pounds overhead. But with piped in music, disco built-in lighting, she-male videos and satin sheets, it is an exercise in pure luxury to sleep in it, and if anyone might wonder what goes on in Nichol's "red bed," just ask Rhonda.

The air-conditioning broke down in Nichol's building and we sweltered in 103° Dallas humid heat. Makeup ran and Rhonda got addicted to O.J. (orange juice), whereupon Nichol took me to her sound studio, and we sank into plush sofas and watched a private showing of "2010," the science fiction picture.

Next day, Nichol dropped Rhonda off at a film development lab. The whistles of the construction workers across the street as Rhonda swished into the store in her plain blue travel dress was exhilarating. Must be the dress.

Finally, the pun in the Dallas pleasure dome was over and Rhonda boarded the plane in her plain smart blue travel dress. The return flight was uneventful. Must be the dress.

FETCHING Rhonda enjoys his bizarre double life.

TRANSVESTITE Ren Smith says guys whistle at him when he's out for a stroll.

... by night he's a blonde bombshell!

has nothing to do with his classified career: In his spare time, when the workday is over, Ron turns into Rhonda.

The high-tech transvestite from Sharon, Mass., dons a curly blonde wig, slips into his sexy snakeskin dress and puts on man-sized pumps with satin straps. Then he sashays around as a woman, revealing in remarks from bug-eyed sidewalk Romeos.

"I'm just another pretty face," Rhonda gushed in a letter to The NEWS. "I work in the nuclear energy industry and I'm a transvestite/crossdresser.

"I've worked on tactical atomic bombs and on other systems such as the Minuteman ICBM, on the Polaris submarines, on the F105 fighter-bomber, Heads turn when slinky Rhonda steps into the room!

and on the cruise missiles. However, it may be even more exciting to know that as I was tracking satellites on assignment in California, I was stiletto-heeling it into the dark recesses of a female impersonator club in Los Angeles."

When he's all dressed up as a femme fatale, Smith is a stunner.

His foam rubber figure is curvy and generous, his clothing straight out of Fredricks of Hollywood.

"I've been the only transvestite at a luau in Honolulu," bragged the buxom boy-girl. "I've done other things also, like strolling down fashionable Fifth Avenue in New York City and being whistled at."

But in his heart of hearts, Smith has just one fantastic dream — to be featured in an article in The Weekly World News so that readers everywhere can see how gorgeous he is!

"In my fantasies and dreams, I've been a snake-dancer in my own designed African pythion skin dress," he confessed. "Or a goddess in ancient Greece.

"But my nicest dream is to pick up a copy of The Weekly World News at the supermarket and open it up and see myself pictured with an article entitled: 'A-Bomb Technician is a Transvestite!'

"That's why I've decided to write and let your readers see a rather exotic 'girl' for themselves."

— SUSAN JIMISON

Readers, I think it is so lovely when one of our readers makes the "Big Time." Lovely Rhonda has appeared before in our letters section and also appears in this issue of letters to the editor. Rhonda must be applauded for the courage it takes to be this open.

Thanks Rhonda!

Love, K.C.

F.M.I. FORBUM

Maxie has a split personality. One day she acts like a goddam nun and the next day she's a positive she-devil.

We asked her a few questions about her mercurial personality and she told us all about her interesting childhood.

MAXIE!

"I was brought up in a very strict environment, but a very loving one. We were pretty well off. We had a series of maids over the years. They only stayed for about five or six years at the most. Some stayed only two or three. Now that I'm grown up and I understand the devious ways of men, I see that my father had an eye for attractive young women.

"He did all the hiring and firing and my mother took care of all the training and domestic management. I think the reason that they never lasted too long is that they started to lose the bloom of youth. They were politely dismissed and well padded monetarily for their efforts. There was never any hard feelings . . . except on my part. I would always make friends with these girls and sometimes I had great crushes on them. My mother would insist that I help them on their daily rounds and for the most part I always looked forward to it. They would tell me of their adventures with their boyfriends and of drinking and smoking and all the things that I was brought up to think were wrong.

“When I was on the verge of being too old to be this intimate with the maids, we had a beautiful girl working for us that I’ll call Lynette. It was the early ’60’s and she had a cute blonde bubble. She couldn’t have been over 20. She and I would do all the beds and then sneak off to her room and I would read her fashion magazines while she got ready for her big night out with her boyfriend, Derek. I loved the smell of her room. It was somehow cheap and feminine all at the same time. She tended to wear a little too much Tabu, but I loved it. At the time it smelled sophisticated to me and something my very unglamorous mother would never wear. She never minded that I was not interested in boy-like things. She always treated me with respect and as if I was a “girl-friend.”

“One early evening I sat with her at her modest but crowded vanity as she put on layer after layer of that nearly white lipstick that was so popular at the time. Then I watched in a trance as she put on the frostiest shade of pale pink nail polish. At this point, she saw that I was totally enraptured with this process. She knew that I was in art school and could wield a brush fairly well and asked in a quiet voice if I would like to do her right hand as it was always a problem for her to get that one done as neatly as the left. My hands trembled as I did it, but I barely remember saying yes. All I knew was that I was stroking the creamy stuff all over her long nails and lost in the concentration of it.

“Well,” she said as her nails dried, “how’d you like to help me pick out something to wear?”

“We went through her drawers and closet. I knew what I had in mind but I did not want her to know that I had her wardrobe practically memorized. I finally found what I had in mind in the bottom drawer of her chest. A cream colored angora sweater.

“I think that sweater is pretty too, but Derek gets too . . . well, you know, worked up when I wear sweaters that are that tight. It would probably fit you better . . . try it on.”

“I started to protest but she stopped me by unbuttoning my scratchy wool shirt and pulling my underwear shirt off over my head.

“As I pulled my arms through the sleeves and smoothed down the glorious sweater, I nearly fainted. It felt better than I had ever dreamed.

“‘It does feel pretty groovy, doesn’t it?’ she cooed as she headed for her closet. ‘I’m going to slip into this shirtwaist but I think that this would look better with that top than your old jeans any day. She tossed me the most beautiful skirt. It was a shocking pink and green window pane on a cream base. After that came the wide pink patterned leather belt and a pair of cream go-go boots. She seemed so unconscious about it all that I did not even question whether or not to put it all on.

“As she surveyed me totally dressed, she chuckled and said that Derek would probably rip it all off me if he were to see me like that. I must have blushed to match the shocking pink because she smiled and said, ‘Well, we could always ask Derek to bring a friend . . .’”

TV confessions

Chris walked back into the bedroom and picked up the satin chemise which matched his bra and panties. He slipped his legs into it after he adjusted the nylon panty hose, and then affixed the straps up over his shoulders. He didn't have to wear falsies any longer because the training brassiere made for very young girls had formed much of the muscle around his breasts into female tit-like structures.

He put on the brown slacks and the brown boots. But that's as far as he dressed for the moment. He liked to dress slowly, take his time, savor every moment, make sure that none of the sensations, the thrills eluded him. Clothes were his complete life and he wasn't going to lose a second of his life. He went back to the bar. He knew he shouldn't have any more, but it was Solly who had played his last hand of cards, and Chris knew Solly, and Solly knew Chris . . . as a friend . . . there would be no problem of getting close to Solly. Solly had bet Chris several times when he was in drag and the bastard always tried to put the make on him even though the fat slob knew Chris didn't play the game that way. Chris, at those times, wanted to knock him on his obese ass, but Solly was in good with the Organization, and to have laid a hand on him might have been some kind of disaster. Words had to do the trick. But Chris hadn't always said no . . . keep hands off.

After his father found out the score, Chris no longer hid anything from his parents. He no longer wore male attire at all and he gave up all male attitudes in walking, speech or anything else which might attach him to the masculine world.

His mother seemed to tolerate and accept the fact that her son/daughter was different almost from the start; many mothers are that way. But they both feared for Henry's health. From that night on, along with never speaking to Chris again, he fell into a melancholy mood whereby he would sit in his big overstuffed chair and stare at the television set; never actually seeing anything. That was proven when they saw him staring at a test pattern for more than half an hour without even a blink of his eye, and his eyes never changed even when the picture came on . . . it went on for two months, and all that time Chris became Shirley around the house, doing all the things she used to do with the housework, the cooking and the other duties a girl might be found doing.

There were few visitors, but Chris didn't give a damn. He dressed the way he wanted and if they didn't like it, they didn't have to return to the house again . . . some of them didn't. Once a postman had to have a letter signed for and Chris almost screamed when he, a stranger, said "Thank you, Miss" and tipped his hat.

Chris knew at this period of his life that the elements were forcing any thought of being a boy, ever again, was being drained from his life. He had taken on the role of the girl and there was no turning back; that would be the farthest thought from his mind in the first place.

But there were many nights when he lay in his room and looked at the dark ceiling and he wondered what stroke of fate had brought on such a situation. However, he also reasoned if he had been born with a female body, perhaps he wouldn't have appreciated the clothes as much as he did, or the illusion of fantasy which caused him to do things to himself up in his private bathroom. Then his hands would travel up and down the flat of his stomach and across the falsies he wore in the bodices to hold the falsies in place, and he would feel the sexual electricity flowing through every nerve in his body, and

“He knew he was born to be just what he was.”

he knew he was born to be just what he was.

Because of the beautiful illusion he presented, he went out on the street in the daytime during that period. No one could deny the lovely sight they saw, if anyone bothered to think about it at all. But usually it was at night when he ventured out. He liked the cool of the evening and the night much more than sunlight. He had such fair skin it was so easy for him to get a sunburn. He never went to pools in the area, although at one time in his youth he loved to swim, but even then he hated the shorts he had to wear . . . the little girls in their swimsuits were much more attractive . . . he longed for the day when he could get swimsuits like that, all colorful and some with ripples or frills . . . and bathing caps to hide his boy-cut hair. Even then he wanted long hair like the girls. It took him many years before that was accomplished.

He took a long time that Wednesday morning as he sat in front of his vanity brushing the very long locks. He was wearing a long pink nightie which was low-cut both in the front and the back, but he couldn't see the cleavage because he had a matching bed jacket on over the gown and it was tied tightly around his neck with a thick satin bow.

He finished the hair brushing and making up his face and stood up to look into the closet which was no longer kept locked. He was considering quite strongly about taking one of his infrequent trips downtown. There was a violet pantsuit he saw in one of the windows when he had been on the main street several days before when he bought the same nightgown set he then had on. But then he decided to go down into the kitchen and have some coffee before he made his decision. Plus he didn't know what the weather forecast was going to be . . . this would be the decision maker for the street wardrobe.

When he reached the living room at the bottom of the stairs he heard his mother pattering around in the kitchen beyond the closed swinging door and he saw his father slumped forward in his big easy chair.

The funeral three days later was a simple affair. Chris wore the conventional black dress, stockings, shoes and a veiled hat which dropped completely over his face. The few friends who attended the graveside rites knew who the lady in black was, but none ventured a word in disgust or otherwise. But Chris knew tongues would wag when they were out of his sight. “Fuck 'em,” he breathed to himself, and then said a short prayer in the same silent breath.

Chris changed into Shirley's blue angora sweater as soon as they got back home. It was much too small for him to wear full length any longer, but it fit perfectly as a halter, and because of the falsies he felt it looked better in the front on him than it ever did on his sister in her time of wearing it. But he selected it because Shirley and her new husband had come back from the funeral and he wanted to surprise her in seeing that he had kept it all that time. White slacks, blue socks and blue high heels finished the outfit.

His mother, still in her mourning clothes, was leaning back in his father's chair, her hands over her eyes. Shirley, who had learned to drink, had poured one for herself and her husband Ralph. And it was quite apparent Shirley had had several more while Chris was upstairs dressing.

“Chris, this is my husband, Ralph.”

Ralph took Chris' dainty hand into his big one, and with a quizzical look turned to Shirley. “I thought you said you only had a brother?”

“This is my brother!”

He sank back into a chair.

Shirley fluffed the fur on the shoulder of the angora sweater. “I see you've kept it.”

“I told you I would.”

“It's still in good shape.”

“I made sure it was kept that way.”

She indicated his mother. “I can see that she knows about it. Did dad?”

Chris nodded. “He caught me one night a couple of months ago. He didn't speak to me from then on.”

The mother came forward in her chair. “It's what killed your father.”

Shirley crossed to her and put her arm around her shoulder. “Oh, Ma. Dad dropped dead of a heart attack, you know that. It's all in the doctor's report.”

“I know what brought on that heart attack . . .” She stabbed a bony finger in Chris' direction. “Him. His son all dressed up in your clothes all the time. Pa wanted a man around the house to take his place, not a second daughter, one of those queer people you always hear about. He didn’t want something like that around for our friends to see, and they did see him like that. He never got back out of girl’s clothes once Pa found out; all the clothes you left behind. Pa couldn’t take it. He just gave up and wanted to die. Him going out on the street looking like a girl bringing on a disgrace to the name of Rawlins, shopping at the stores like they didn’t know he was a fairy, things got just too much for your Pa and he died.”

Ralph got quickly to his feet and went to the table where the whiskey bottle was and poured a double shot which he quickly slugged down. “What in the hell kind of a family have I married into. I’ve got a wife who has developed into a rumsot, and a fag brother-in-law. I want out of it.” He turned and left the room and the house, slamming the front door behind him.

Chris tried to find words, but they came hard. “I’m . . . I’m sorry sis.”

“Oh, shut up, fag!”

“I didn’t think you’d . . .”

“Why the hell don’t you go away someplace where you can find people like yourself. Grandview isn’t a place for the likes of you. Maybe Pa did go out the way mother said. Now you had to chase Ralph away.”

“You’re the one who brought him here.”

“How in hell did I know that you had gone completely ape. I thought you’d have the decency to keep it to your own room.” She stood up and mirrored Ralph’s movements to and with the bottle, even to slugging the straight booze down in one quick swipe. “Now get some of the decency you should have shown and get out of this house and this town. You’re no brother, or would you prefer, sister? Well you’re no sister of mine . . . and I don’t have a brother.”

The mother seemed to go into a trance where she hadn’t heard any of the shouting. She spoke softly. “Father left us all well off, you know.”

Shirley went back to put the arm around her mother again, but her eyes glared up at Chris who stood with his arms folded over the Angora covered falsies. “I’ll be gone sometime this week.”

He turned and went back to the stairs and headed up to the bedroom where he would take his pent up anger out on his prick.

This time it was a shortlived experience; perhaps it was the anger which had built up in him with the words from the sister he had adored all through the years from the first time had had asked for the blue angora. But she had turned on him and he knew there would be no turning back.

He cleaned his fingers and his cock off with cotton and threw the messy material down the toilet and flushed it, then went back to his bed and lay out straight, straining every muscle to the fullest. He wanted to cry, but it wasn’t in his nature to bring the tears to his eyes . . . although his eyes did cloud and he wasn’t looking at the black ceiling of his bedroom, it was a cold off yellow; he never liked that color; he was going to have it changed; it just never happened . . . but now it was over.

His arms crossed the blue of the angora and the fur felt good to the touch, much better than it had in the bathroom a few moments before. He’d never get rid of that garment, no matter how long he lived . . . and he had thought about it because of his sister’s words. But really what were they to him. His mother and father had brought him into the world in some kind of a strange way, he was neither he or she . . . but he knew he wanted to be her as far as could be humanly possible . . . there would be no one, friend or foe, who could change the elements which had already happened.

"I did not kill my father," he screamed at the top of his lungs. "He just didn't understand."

If anyone heard his cries on the floor below, no one appeared at the sounds.

He rolled and tossed on the bed, and even though his eyes closed and he found some measure of sleep, the nervous sweat drenched his body, the sweater and the skirt, the base of his scalp, his hair.

Then it was dark, very dark, and the rain clouds came in, and the lightning streaked and the thunder roared, echoing back and forth as it hit the distant mountains. He rolled out of bed and slowly slipped the damp sweater and slacks, the panties and the brassiere from his body and moved to stand naked in front of the full length mirror. He hated what he saw; the flaccid cock, the no-nothing chest where he had already begun to shave, and would have to get the hair remover stuff, which might be able to eliminate the unwanted growth for good. He retrieved the brassiere and the panties from the bed . . . the reflection from the mirror told him that was better . . . he had no mother, no father . . . he was dragged out from under a rock one day . . . that felt better!

He molded his hands over the false-filled brassiere and for the moment he wanted to tear it off in disgust, but the feeling in his panties told him that would be more of a disaster. Instead, he went to the dresser and took out a white nightgown; flowing in billows of pleats, very low cut in the front. He put the falsies in and went back to bed and pulled the satin sheets up to his waist and put one hand on each of his tits . . . he closed his eyes, and his mind began to wander along the paths of the previous months; his father's talk with him; the discovery; the week after week girl-like responsibility; his sister's change of attitude; the mother going insane because of her loss; he knew she was going insane even though he was no psychiatrist . . . what was it his father had said. He didn't remember the exact words, but it was something like . . . "You go to college and you've got nothing to worry about. Your sister is married now and gone away, that makes you have more to work on" . . . that was close enough.

Chris put his arms under his head and stared out the window looking for even one star. He could see none.

There was no doubt what he had to get out of was that house. He had figured that for sometime, but it had been so easy to wear what he wanted and to help his mother . . . but looking back he really hadn't been treated any more like Christine than he had been as Christopher; his mother had only been a tolerant agent to his deviations from what they considered normal . . . by their puritanical standards . . . a boy was a boy and a girl was a girl and there were no two ways about it. This was the law of the land and of the church.

To hell with the law of the land or the church. He had some kind of law within himself . . . he had feelings . . . he had a mind . . . when it was needed . . . he had to use it then.

He got up from the bed and cross-

"A boy was a boy, and a girl a girl."

ed to a chair which was near the window. There wasn't much to see beyond, but he stared into space

. . . a starless space . . . the great black beyond . . . that's where his father was . . . out there somewhere in eternity . . . he'd never come back . . . he'd never be able to tell what he had thought at that moment of recognition, that he had sired a pup which was neither boy or girl.

Chris knew he had to get those kind of thoughts out of his mind. He felt positive that he had not been responsible for his father's death. His father couldn't cope with reality; but reality was with everyone!

He couldn't be the only one in the world with the desires that captured his mind the way they did. What about college? What about that? Would it be worth a try?
