Dear Ones,

We need your help. Not that we haven't had tons of it already and we are too, too grateful. It's just that we feel to truly be of service to you we need more feedback on what type of projects you would like to see us do.

A few of you have been more than helpful in this area already and we have often taken your advice to delightful consequences. But we want to hear from those of you who would not ordinarily respond in writing to our magazine. If you need to be discrete and anonymous we understand. It's just that your voice should count for the type of entertainment we can offer you.

If you need prompting, here's a few questions to consider:

What kind of fiction would you like to read in F.M.I.

Would you like longer fiction and less photos?

Would you like less sexually oriented fiction?

Would you like more sexually oriented fiction?

More homosexual or heterosexual orientation?

More letters to the editor, or less?

How do you feel about the contests and pageants?

More photos from readers?

How do you feel about she-males as opposed to regular transvestites?

What kind of new videos would you like to see?

More transformation videos?

Transvestite romance videos?

How about a video of reader contributions?

Well, hopefully that will get your thinking gears rolling. Write to us and let us know how you feel especially those of you who have been too shy before. Special thanks to those of you who have been so helpful in the past about creative suggestions.

*Much love to you all,
Kim Christy*

World Traveler

Dear Kim,

It has been a long time since I wrote a letter to the editor but I am very impressed by the quality that I find in Female Mimics. So many of the TV magazines are full of trash that to find one that has maintained class for so long is very refreshing.

Lynn Jackson

I would love to see a photo-article on the history or life and times of Kim Christy. It has been far too long since your photos have graced the pages of any magazine. You have been a role model for my attempt at femininity, I have never been able to achieve the image of loveliness that you have achieved, however.

I am a longtime TV but I won't bore you with the details of how I began, etc., etc., etc. I have been out of the closet for years, ever since I went on R & R in Honolulu and lost my virginity to a really sweet CPA from L.A. I have often wondered what became of him. I had a job since that allowed me to travel around the world and where my male self went Lynne was always along, from Rio to London, Bangkok to Paris, Manila and Hong Kong, even in Tokyo. Oriental men really like she-males and especially tall round-eyed girls. Wow!

I'm now restricted to travel and live near D.C. but there is still plenty of TV activity to keep Lynne occupied. I'm currently dating a tall handsome Marine and have a GG girlfriend who is 6'0" stocking feet and we share our wardrobe. Makes the lingerie drawer very simple since we both have similar taste and wear the same size except for bras.

I've enclosed a photo which I hope you will see fit to print.

Washington, D.C. has lost many of the drag bars in the past two years but there is still enough to go around. The problem seems to be that all too many TVs do not frequent these clubs often enough to keep them operating at a profit.

Could you do a spread on drag clubs across the U.S? When I travel I like to go out and always have trouble locating a drag spot. In Columbia, S.C. last year I stumbled onto the one drag bar in town because of the Miss Gay U.S.A. pageant being held there.

Once again, I love your magazine and never miss an issue. The glamour of the models is unexcelled and the quality of the photography equals Playboy or Penthouse.

Thank you for providing it to all the girls like me.

Sincerely,
Lynne Jackson

Dear Lynne,

Thank you, thank you, thank you.

I hope you all know how much I love to hear this kind of stuff. No letter is too gushing! Please, Lynne, help us in your travels. If you would send us the names and addresses of the places you go and just a few words about your reaction to the ambience we would be so appreciative. We're trying to put together some kind of international directory and your input, as well as that of all the other readers, would be so appreciated.

Love,
Kim C.

Recent Discovery

Dear Kim,

Let me introduce myself. Miss Cheryl Ann Robinson, 5-9 (150lbf) brown hair, hazel eyes and a conformed transfemme since early childhood. My reason for writing is two-fold. As an avid reader and

Cheryl Ann

“By the time of birth our little friend is caught in a split-second decision.”

writer I keep up with national and all current events and a recent discovery at M.I.T. may prove helpful to our “sisters” in understanding more about themselves as they travel this bumpy road we all must cope with. It appears an elusive gene early in birth determines whether we will be male or female and is found only in the “Y” chromosome found inborn to men but not women. Now this sounds all too familiar as something we have known for generations but the KEY to this sex trigger determiner is that proven tests showed that as in all forms of life there is a “roamer” or “carefree” soul who wants to go their own way. Thus in this discovery researchers found that the new so-called “trigger” tends to wander off on occasion to join the female chromosomes temporarily before making up it's mind as to which side to choose. By time of birth our little friend is caught in a split second decision and usually leaps back to the male side to continue its process of life. In the meantime the little varmit has picked up general female traits and most of the common mannerisms and feelings all natural women enjoy and carries them along to the male whom it will not become aware of till after 4 or 5 yrs of age. By then the confused program of what gender we are seems to become apparent and another life will shortly become torn between the heartaches all we girls suffer. At the moment of discovery a London research center and a professor at the University of Michigan were stumbling across the same answer. All have agreed that near future developments will lead to a greater understanding of why men want to be women and vice versa. The Drs involved in this effort are as follows:

Dr. David C. Page
Whitehead Institute at M.I.T.
David Baltimore
Noble Laureate working for same
Dr. Robert Erickson
University of Michigan
Dr. Peter Goodfellow
Imperial Research Fund of London, England

Maybe this information can help others like ourselves smooth the bumps in a tormented road of life.

I've enclosed some letters that I would like forwarded and placed them all together here knowing that you'll be able to forward them to the proper dept. promptly without any confusion. On this subject, your alignment of ads and photos could stand some adjustment as there are numerous errors with codes and pics not properly headed correctly. And why oh why do you not have states or general geographical locations with each??? Anyway just a suggestion.

Your magazine Vol. 17 No. 2/#40 had an excellent article and your appropriate reply from "DEBBIE". I've read other articles from publications that she has written and would very much like to meet her and hopefully share our ambitions and all desires as our lives both appear to have taken identical courses and feelings seem to be mutual. While reading her latest expo to you I couldn't help but notice that it appeared to be myself crying out the same tale as if she were my twin. If you can get a note to her or forward her address it would be appreciated. Likewise feel free to give her my address as I would very much like to make contact. Also, if you should use this information please let me know what issue or when it's available (cost) and I'll send a check direct to you for a copy, as this area is so-so on book stores.

As for myself, I continue to plod along at 35 trying to stay young and hoping that right someone will come along to take me from the misery. My dream is to write for a publication and be able to live out my life as a woman. A cosmetic case of stories, details and information for other sisters sits idle while I seek my elusive goals. If in anyway you can help in finding anyone interested in a easily passible lady writer feel free to pass on my address. Continue your good work and best of wishes with your own personal goals in life.

Love Cheryl Ann

Dear Cheryl Ann,

What interesting information. Seems to make sense doesn't it? At least for some of us. But I think the reasons why many folk are a gradating spectrum of sexual and gender orientations come from a wide variety of influences. I identify with exactly what you've culled here in your letter. But for others it's very different. Some of the most ultra-masculine solid-as-a-rock 100% hetero-sexual men need to dress up once in a while as a relief. Also I think there are spiritual aspects to these issues.

“Some of the most ultra-masculine men need to dress up once and a while as a relief.”

With this issue we will weed out some of the bloopers in our ad section. We were doing so well for a while, I don't know what happened. Maybe Tina Alameda got some bad acid.

This is how the ads work for your info. The new ads go at the back of the section. This makes state headings impossible but the ad placers could include that information. Putting all the new ads together lets you know whether or not you've written to someone before or not. "Is this a new ad? It must be it's in the back of the section." Comprendé? This way as ads are slowly included over the months, the oldest ads, the ones in the front of the section are removed. Now, when we receive information that an ad is obsolete for one reason or another we try to remove it as quickly as possible. Between editor, artist and printer a certain number of mistakes are bound to turn up. We also believe in poltergeists. But we try as hard as possible to stay on top of it. Now, your payment for ad placement guarantees one insertion, but chances are likely with this system that your ad will hang around for several insertions.

Thanks for all your input and I hope we hear more from you.

Best,
Kim Christy

Truthful

Dear Kim,

I put a lot of thought into this letter and would love for you to print it.

Some of the things I say may be too controversial and suggestive for printing, because some might take it as an endorsement for indiscriminate sex change. I think your magazine should point out it is not necessarily the editor's viewpoint if you feel necessary. However, I tried throughout the letter to say it's not for everyone.

I know it is lengthy, and you may not want to publish it at all or you may not want to publish parts of it. However, I mean every word of it and it truly comes from my heart and many years of experience.

A great songwriter once said that sometimes you become the instrument of what it is that has to be said. It lacks the lustre and glamour of fantasy stories and sorority pictures but I had to tell my sisters secrets I can't tell my wife, family, or closest friends.

It's your column, and your decision but as I said in the letter, I wish someone had given me this advice years ago.

I may be right or I may be wrong in writing this letter, but it is as truthful as I have ever been.

I have a quick question that maybe you answer either in your magazine or by letter. What is the BEST ESTIMATE of the true number of both Transvestites and Transsexuals in this country and in the world. (Both in real numbers and as a percentage of the population.)

I love your column and I hope you have the space to print this letter. It may not apply to some of the girls that subscribe to your magazine, but for the ones it applies to I hope it helps. It's written with sincerity to help all, but especially to help the young ladies who have their lives ahead of them.

I'm a transvestite and I wore one of my sisters' dresses when I was five. I've been dressing in women's clothes since then and I'm 42 now. I don't know for sure if a transsexual includes those that want to be a person of the opposite sex, if so, then I'm a transsexual also. I've felt quilt and shame for this until just recently. Now I can say I'm proud of both, I love it, and I won't change my mind about it for anything. This brings me to the point of this letter.

I've been married for eight years and my wife just found out about it. We have a 5-year-old boy who is just precious, and now I can't get a sex change because of his age and how it might affect him. If I had married earlier and he was in his teens or early twenties maybe I could put him through it. If I had not married, I wouldn't have any obstacles, or for that matter testicles in my way. Girls get a hold of your feelings, find out what you want and go for it. It's common knowledge these feelings only get stronger the older you get. I know not every TV has the same dreams, hopes, or desires but for those of you that love to dress completely, wear sanitary napkins in your panties, and sit down to urinate, please get professional help.

Professional help? YES! The more modern approach to our situation is not to change us, but to help us. Many cities have a mental health clinic that has people to help. The clinics usually charge on your ability to pay. Whether it's a clinic, a Ph.D., or a psychiatrist, get someone to help you make up your mind before it's too late. While the males in this profession are good, I personally prefer a woman because who knows better than a woman how nice a bubble bath is or how sexy lingerie feels against your shaved legs. Make all your first contacts on the telephone, it's easier, if you are like me ask for a woman counselor only, and remember they are very discrete.

“If I had not married I would have no obstacles, or for that matter testicles in my way.”

If you're not up to that yet, here is how you go about it. Don't waste your money on clothes that might not fit. Start by putting aside a day for yourself. Get up, take a shower or bath, and get into your best outfit and then get out the yellow pages and start by calling the lingerie shops, women's clothiers, wig shops, beauty shops, skin care consultants, electrologists, etc., explain your situation, tell them what you want and you will be surprised at the results. There are countless women who understand. They are in business to sell their product, not to judge. Take notes as you call these people because you will probably forget who is who. You will call so many, and probably strike out only 25% of the time. Don't worry about the strikeouts, they don't know who you are. When you find the shops that will take care of you give them your business. Ask them the best days and time of day to shop in their store. Secondly, get a private mailing address (listed in the yellow pages under "mail service" or whatever) and get the specialty catalogues that you need whether it be for lingerie, shoes, tall sizes. Eventually, you will get up the guts to order subscriptions and items from the people who deal in TV items. Support all these people. Don't waste anyone's time on the phone if you are not going to shop there, it gives all the rest of us a bad name. I've been refused appointments because people have not kept their appointments. Do this today, and you'll love yourself for it.

Now for a few of my technical tips. I love to use Nupercainal anesthetic ointment on my scrotum and penis. It makes you feel you don't have them and makes the penis about as small as if you were swimming in ice water. It helps to conceal it when dressed up and if you are like me and don't like those parts, you forget you have them. The way to do it is to apply liberally a few hours before your bath and cover with a piece of cellophane like the kind your dry cleaning comes back in. It keeps the ointment from rubbing off and gives the best effect. Don't expect to use the penis for a while. It will only work when you sit down to pee, not much good for anything else. But I never liked mine anyway. If you like yours it will be back in service in 6 to 8 hours, if you do it right. Less time if you do it wrong.

The best things I ever bought were my artificial breasts. I have a set from Amoena Camp. I got them in a specialty shop, they are a little cheaper in Penneys. Whatever you get, get good ones, the foam rubber just doesn't make it. I can't believe it took me so long to find this out. It's the most important part of my wardrobe and makes me feel more like a woman. Until you can afford them do it the way Millie describes it with the water balloons, etc.

I thought that I was a TV because I had a difficult time getting dates as a kid, and thought it was a substitute for girls, I was wrong. I had a difficult time getting dates because being a TV was more important. I would rather give oral sex to a woman than be in her because I love vaginas so much that I wish I had one so someone could put 6 or 8 inches inside me.

You girls that can relate to this, do yourself a favor. Get the help and support from professionals and if you think your present job doesn't allow it then get a job, preferably one that is generally with women. Try airline reservations offices, telephone operators in catalogue companies or whatever you can do to work with women. After you are established, then go for it, they treat you like one of the girls and are very understanding and the guys in those jobs are not macho and won't bother you either.

I just came out of the closet and I understand now that I waited too long. If you decide to get married, marry a girl that understands. Mine may someday, I hope.

Other than going out at night in the car, I never went out in public. The other day I went out in daylight after getting instructions for makeup and fixing my wig. I went shopping at some of the stores that know me as a transvestite and they thought I was a woman . . . until I spoke . . . voice control is next . . . My dressmaker is designing me a tea-length dress with a lace bodice and chiffon skirt. It's designed after the one I tried on that she had made for a beauty queen from my state who won the state beauty contest. My dressmaker zipped me up and told me to twirl around to see how the chiffon skirt looked and then told me who had worn it. I don't have to ask you girls how I felt. What a beautiful feeling. I couldn't chose anything else

“The heck with society, you only go around once in life. Go for the gusto.”

knowing if it's good enough for the state beauty queen it's certainly good enough for a girl like me. I saw the label inside when I took it off with her name and title. Then we joked about the fact that most of the ladies say make it look like I don't have any hips. When this dress is done I won't have to wear padding because a dressmaker can make you look anyway you want to look. I can't imagine not wanting to show off my hips. I can't guarantee you the same thing but I looked up my dressmaker in the bridal section of the yellow pages and selected her from the ones that advertised that they design their own. That might be out of reach for some of you girls right now, but like I said before don't waste your money. Save up for the best. This dress will cost me $600.00 and I'm making payments on it. It may sound like a lot and most of my clothes are normal clothes that I buy on sale, but when my dressmaker said twirl around and see how beautifully the skirt flows, and as it was flowing, and I saw glimpses of my pretty lace petticoat under the beautiful flowing chiffon skirt, and then she said Miss So and So wore this I had such a feeling of femininity and beauty that I realized that for so many years I missed out on so much because society frowns on us.

Photos from Readers

The heck with society! You only go around once in life . . . reach for all the gusto you can! If you read this letter and it applies to you, please read it again and do it today. I wish I knew 20 or 25 years ago or back when Christine Jorgenson came back to the U.S. what I know today because I would have made a lot of different decisions. I remember getting excited as a kid when I heard of Christine on the news. If you are in this category, let the professionals help. They will help you make the right decisions. And if you opt for changes in your sex, get the best doctors money can buy to do it right. I'm not qualified to tell you girls what sex you should be, the professionals can only do that. And while I have not gone through a complete evaluation for a sex change, I can't at this time because at 42 years old I know myself better than anyone else and I know what the answer is, but it's too late because I've burned most of my bridges behind me. I presume someday I might take my own advice but I can't do it for a while because of my son. However, I love him so much and would never like him to go through a life like this, but if he was like me I would give him so much love and support through his decisions because I've been there. My therapist is working with a 60-year-old who is finally doing it. Can you imagine so many years of depriving yourself of what you really want? Try telling a pretty woman that she can only go out to shop, work, party, or sleep in plain pants and shirt and big ugly shoes until she's 60 years old. No bubble baths, no painted fingernails, makeup, lipstick, or perfume, no panties, bras, no breasts or sanitary napkins, no shaving legs or underarms, no slips, no camisoles, no nighties, no garters, pantyhose, or stockings, no petticoats, no party dresses, evening gowns or bridal gown, nothing pretty at all until she's 60 years old. That's not what society tells us. Society says NEVER to us. That 60-year-old woman had to live that way and finally after 60 years said I won't do it any longer. I say 60-year-old woman because he was a woman for his entire life but society said he wasn't. Why am I so bitter??? Because I screw up. Nobody told it to me straight and I never asked the right questions. I like the articles in these magazines, peoples' fantasies, dreams, desires, and experiences. But no one told it to me straight. If every time you see a lady and are jealous of her beautiful legs, or can't wait for another glimpse of her pretty slip or just love her hair, makeup, fingernail polish, or the smell of her perfume. GO FOR IT, become her. Get to that therapist now and start living that life NOW. Live it for the period of time your therapist requires. If it's what you really want when the test period is over you will love signing the form before going into the operating room. You'll wake up knowing you will never have to put on men's clothing again for the rest of your life. Pick out a pretty name and imagine when you wake up in the hospital, that's the name the pretty nurses will call you when they tell you your operation went perfectly. The first few days of pain will be far less than the lifetime of pain without the operation.

A good therapist will never let you make the wrong decision. If you don't see one then YOU may make the wrong decision.

Ray

I'm not trying to talk anyone into something that's not for him. I'm talking to you girls that know deep down inside what you want but are scared as hell to ask. I'm scared as hell wondering how I will get through the rest of my life knowing everyday that I want something more and more, and didn't do something about it until I painted myself into a corner. If your friends and family love you they will accept you, some sooner than others. But when a small child is involved it's much too hard to bring about such a drastic change that will affect him so much in his formative years.

I could say I love you all but I don't know you personally, but I love our sorority, and wish you all the best.

Don't make any snap decisions, but when it's time to decide think of yourself first, and think of your loved ones, (the adults can cope), think about our sorority, and FORGET SOCIETY. They know you even less than I do. I mean it, I know you better than they do and if they can not be tolerant and understanding they aren't worth it.

Love, best wishes, and happiness,
Jackie

Dear Jackie,

What a beautiful and moving letter. I really must say that I have never read such an inspirational and passionate plea for the realization of self. You could practically fill in any secret desire or life dream into the TV slot and your message would still come through loud and clear. There are no black and white answers and your case proves that perfectly. There is a responsibility in having children and I respect you so for considering it. Also, I totally agree that everyone who feels extremely about our issues might benefit from the support of a sympathetic therapist.

*Much love and hope for you and thank you again,
Kim Christy*

I Have One Just Like It

A Poem By Sally

Before my birth, my Daddy wanted me . . .
To be a boy

But, Mother knew that I would be a girl . . .
Both missed the real McCoy

For I am just a little girl . . .
That has a stately cock

It's not supposed to be there . . .
Hiding in my frock

I don't know how I got to be . . .
A girl that has a prick

The stork that brought this bundle home . . .
Sure played a dirty trick

Daddy thinks it's awful . . .
When I'm in dresses and high heels

But how could he, a man . . .
Know just how wonderful it feels

Boys can't wait to date me . . .
And slip my panties down

But when they see what's in them . . .
Their smile turns to a frown

I wonder what it's like . . .
To be a girl with nothing there

To let a man make love to you . . .
To screw without a care

I seem to be attractive . . .
Men like to be with me

And hold me close, and whisper things . . .
And kiss me tenderly

Then out it comes, his big, stiff cock . . .
He almost has a fit

But, I say no, I cannot fuck . . .
I have one just like it

I hope someday to find someone . . .
Who cares not of my gender

Who'll think of me as someone dear . . .
And love me, oh so tender

To that someone, I'll give my soul . . .
My love, I'll daily send

And cherish him throughout my life . . .
Until the very end

Love,
Sally

If you are tired of the extreme artful look of the nighttime creatures; if you want the warmth and naturalness of a serene confident person, then Suzanne is waiting for you.

Smooth, sleek and blonde, with a fresh scrubbed . . . almost country-girl look, Suzanne is a sincere person of rare self-possession. Suzanne wants to be made love to. She wants the hours of delicate caresses and gentle touching that we all seek, and yet she is willing to give it as well.

Suzanne in the Morning

Suzanne has her strong side. She can be masterful and imperious. She has a secret in her panties that can terrify the strong at heart. But fear not, for it is the morning and Suzanne is waiting for you.

THE BATTLE OF THE V.I.P.s

On these pages we see just a few of the contestants for both contests in LaRey's Fabulous opening number — all in white. The theme of the show this year was "Broadway" with all its attendant glamour. The sets and costumes reflected the Great White Way's ebullience. Posters representing many of Broadway's hits papered the walls. Show tunes rang out and the stagelights sizzled as we sat for three and a half hours watching the most talented boys in women's clothing hit the heights.

MISS GAY LOS ANGELES

Empress Lola and Emperor Lee Williamson were on hand to host and emcee the event. Lola spent hours entertaining us all with her wit. The contests were all combined tonight giving us a powerful sampling of talent and beauty: Miss Gay Los Angeles — 1988, Goddess XVII and Miss V.I.P. — 1988, were all selected out of this evening's contestants. So the backstage tensions were high and the glitter sparkled on stage as we all had a marvelous time.

The talent competition was primarily lip-synching. This is fine with us. There is a lot of wonderful recorded music to use. Many folks chose great tunes, but why, we so often wonder, do so few people choose to learn the words? The few who had their words down seemed so much more professional and confident. Think about it if you are ever in a similar situation.

Above: Shannon (now a real woman) gives out some trophies. At left; Vanessa's little Italian momma (we think) gives her bambino(a) a big smooch. What could make a mother more proud? At right the classy new Miss Gay L.A. (we don't have her name cause we were too drunk to hear it that night and La Rey won't answer her phone and we have to go to print now!) Also see the cover for her absolutely fabulous Marilyn.

ARE YOU MALE, HETEROSEXUAL, submissive, and interested in crossdressing? Does the thought of being forced to wear feminine clothing all of the time absolutely thrill you? Do you like the idea of being dressed in skirts and trained to mimic female speech and behavior? Do you dream of becoming totally feminized, in mind as well as body, without actually having a sex change operation? Would you give up the life and privileges of a man to become the obedient, pampered, crossdressed male wife in a marriage to a dominant, aggressive female husband? Do you know the meaning of phrases like — "petticoat punishment" — "corset discipline" — "forced femininity" — "sissy"? How would you feel if you had to dress completely as a female in every detail and appear in public before men and women who knew that you were really a man? Would you feel silly and foolish if you were made to wear a sanitary napkin in your panties? Do words like girdle, garter belt, nylons, high heels, lipstick and lingerie make you blush? If you find these questions interesting write and ask for a free copy of The Sissy Times newsletter. SASE required. See illustration. F572

PART TWO
Sissy Stanley Dresses Up

BY SHARON ANN STUART

This piece of fiction is from Sharon Anne Stuart's fabulous publication, The Sissy Times. Please see our catalog pages for ordering information.

Stanley now kept a secret cache of women's clothing hidden in the attic. Many of the garments in his attic hidey-hole were castoffs that his mother had forgotten or put into a rag box in the basement. There were also several garments in the attic hiding place that had been taken off neighbor's clotheslines. Stanley usually wore these purloined items for a few days before returning them to the owners on the sly.

When Helen Hemphill happened to hear Mrs. Baldwin, who lived two doors down, say that her girdle had disappeared from the backyard she was more than a little suspicious that the thief might be Stanley. But a thorough search of his room turned up nothing. Had she looked in a certain place in the attic Helen would have found not only Mrs. Baldwin's girdle but a treasure trove of feminine finery, albeit a wrinkled and dusty treasure trove.

It was in the wee hours of the morning that Stanley would crawl out of bed and tiptoe up to the attic to enjoy an hour or two of uninterrupted transvestism. Fortunately for Stanley, Helen Hemphill was a sound sleeper. Many a night at three a.m. Stanley could be found in the attic dressed in his rags and castoffs playing girlish games in the shimmering shadows of a single naked light bulb. There was even an old cracked dresser mirror to examine his reflection in.

When Stanley grew tired of rags and wary of stealing girdles from clotheslines he started to purchase items for himself. His funds were very limited but he managed to acquire make-up and several pairs of panties and a bra. He purchased these items himself in a department store where he went on the way home from school. He hid them in his violin case and smuggled the clothing into the house and up to the attic.

Christmas came and went. Stanley's restriction was lifted a month early for what Helen thought was "good behavior." He also had his allowance restored and was once more allowed to drive the car.

Stanley was busy with his violin lessons and with his senior year in high school. During his last semester in high school Satnley was required to participate in one of the extracurricular programs in addition to his class studies. Since he was not athletic Stanley had to choose between the Glee Club, the Literary Society, the Science and Math Club or the Drama Club.

"Stanley played his

Stanley could have chosen any of those four extracurricular activities but he chose the Drama Club. Stanley had a good reason for choosing the Drama Club as we shall learn presently. In any event, the choice was one which was to have a great impact on his future.

It was the middle of April and Mrs. Hemphill was home on a day off from her job as a secretary for an insurance firm. Stanley came home from school and warmly greeted his mother with a kiss and a hug.

"I was selected for a lead role in the senior play at tryouts today," he told his mother proudly.

"Oh, that is wonderful, dear," Helen gushed. "What play are they going to do this year?"

"Mrs. Clarkson Goes to Washington."

"I don't believe I know that play," Helen admitted. "What is it about?"

"It's a comedy," Stanley told her. "It's about a woman who is elected to the U.S. Senate in the 1930's during the Great Depression and the things that happen to her in politics."

"Oh, that's nice, dear."

Helen paused to finish addressing an envelope to mail while Stanley took his jacket off and hung it in the hall closet.

"What part did you get?" Mrs. Hemphill asked finally.

"Miss Shelby, the drama coach, wants me to play Mrs. Clarkson," Stanley said with a shy smile.

There was only silence from Helen as she digested this unexpected news.

"Not very many guys tried out for the part," Stanley continued. "I wasn't going to read for it either but Miss Shelby asked me to — so I did — and she thought I was the best."

Mrs. Hemphill had to sit down.

"Now, let me get this straight, Stanley," she began with a perplexed look on her face. "You tried out for a female part in the senior play — why can't they get a girl to play this part?"

"It's a boy's school, mother. We don't have any girls."

"Of course not. I know that. But couldn't they bring someone in? Someone must have a sister who could play the part."

"Miss Shelby wants me to play the part but I'm going to need some help with my costumes."

"Like what help?"

"Well, the school has dresses and coats and things like that which came from the Salvation Army second-hand store but I have to get my own shoes and underwear. I also need to get a wig."

"I see," Helen said curtly.

"Oh mother, it's going to be lots of fun," Stanley enthused.

"And, you've already agreed to do this," Helen interrupted.

"Yes, mother. I told Miss Shelby I would take the part. Really, it's going to be great experience."

Helen was beside herself. It made no sense to her at all.

"I just can't understand why you want to do this. After all the grief you've given me over the years, sneaking around, wearing my clothes — and now you want to get up on a stage and play a woman's part in a school play. I'd think you would be embarrassed to tears to do that in front of your friends — in front of the whole school — making a fool of yourself. I just can't believe that you would do this."

Stanley blushed at her words but he was more determined than ever.

"Mother, listen — it isn't like that at all. This is different. Guys have been playing girls' parts in the senior play for years. Everyone knows about it. It's no big deal. I'm going to play a part and learn how to act."

"You must really want to do it then. Well, I think it's crazy and I'm going to go have a talk with your Miss Shelby and the headmaster as well."

"Please mother," Stanley pleaded, "I really want to do this. Don't interfere."

But the next day Mrs. Hemphill set out to do just that — interfere with her son's playing the role of Mrs. Clarkson in the senior play. First, she made an appointment to see a psychiatrist who specialized in children's problems. Helen made the appointment for herself. Two days later, after spending an hour with the doctor, she went to see the headmaster at Stanley's school. There was a meeting in the headmaster's office and Miss Shelby, the drama coach, was called in.

That afternoon Mrs. Hemphill waited at home for Stanley to return from school. When he arrived Stanley looked very apprehensive. He knew that his mother had been to see the headmaster concerning the role he was going to play in "Mrs. Clarkson Goes to Washington."

"I met with Headmaster Barnes and with Miss Shelby this morning," Helen told Stanley. She paused and couldn't help but smile at the anxious look on his face.

"And we all agreed that you should play the role of Mrs. Clarkson in the senior play."

"Oh that's great mother," Stanley squealed, giving her a big hug and a kiss.

"But, there's one condition," she

“You know darling, it would be a good idea if we dressed you up for the shopping trip.”

continued. "If you're going to be the female lead in the senior play you're going to do it right and look good doing it. I told Miss Shelby that I wasn't going to have you traipsing around on stage in Salvation Army castoffs. I'm going to pick out your costumes for you myself. Miss Shelby gave me a list of the scenes and all the outfits you will need."

"Oh mother, that's wonderful. Thank you, thank you, thank you," Stanley blurted with obvious pleasure. "When do we start? I have dress rehearsals in two weeks," he added.

"Why don't we just drive up to the city this weekend and go on a little shopping spree together. I get paid this Friday. We can go up Friday after school is out and stay in a motel and do our shopping on Saturday. We'll stay Saturday night and come back on Sunday."

While Stanley studied the costume list Helen had a sudden inspiration.

"You know, darling — it would be a good idea if we dressed you up as a young lady for the shopping trip. You could use the practice walking and talking and you can borrow my clothes until we buy you some of your own."

"I don't know, mother, if I want to do that right away," Stanley replied sounding reluctant for the first time. "I don't think I have enough experience yet to just get dressed up and go out in public like that. What if someone realizes that I am a boy?"

"Nonsense," Helen replied. "No one is going to recognize you as a boy. Do you recall when I caught you last fall wearing my sweater and pleated skirt? I would never have said anything like this to you then — but you looked so feminine that day. I couldn't believe how much like a girl you were."

Stanley was taken a little by surprise at his mother's sudden change of attitude toward his being dressed in female attire.

When they left for the city late Friday afternoon Stanley was wearing a casual jean skirt, a blouse and one of his mother's jackets. Underneath was a bra, pantyhose and a halfslip. A wide leather belt cinched his waist. His face was lightly made up and he wore a colorful scarf on his head to cover his short hair. The ensemble was understated and appropriate attire for a seventeen-year-old girl.

When they arrived at the motel Mrs. Hemphill put Stanley's hair in curlers and trimmed his sideburns back. She also plucked his eyebrows and shaped them into gentle arches. Then she manicured his fingernails and applied several coats of bright lacquer. The same was done to his toenails. It thrilled Stanley to be pampered so by his mother this way. She gave him a nightgown to wear and he went to sleep wearing it over his bra and panties.

They got up early the next morning and spent two hours preparing for their shopping trip. After Stanley had put on his girdle, nylon stockings, bra and full slip, Helen made up his face and combed his short curly hair into an acceptable feminine style. Then he put on one of his mother's nice dresses along with a pair of high heels and appropriate accessories.

"You look very, very nice," Helen complimented his appearance. "How do you feel?"

"Okay, but I guess I'm still a little nervous about going out dressed up this way," Stanley admitted. "I wish that my hair was longer."

"It's ironic really — that short, sassy style is very much in fashion for young ladies these days. It gives you a sort of boyish look that is quite charming. But, we're going to buy you some wigs anyway. Your face is perfect for a shoulder-length flip style hairdo."

And so when Stanley and his mother left the motel the first stop they made was at a beauty salon. There they purchased two wigs and a chignon hairpiece, all in the same shade as Stanley's own chestnut brown hair. Helen explained matter-of-factly to the beauty shop owner that her son was simply being outfitted for a female role in a high school play.

Back out on the street Helen said to Stanley, who was now suitably coiffed in soft shoulder-length tresses, "I can't be calling you Stanley anymore. I'm going to call you Susan."

Susan and her mother then went off to shop for his costumes. Susan's nervousness at being out in public as a girl soon subsided as she gained more confidence in her appearance. Having the wig helped tremendously. It was a distinct new thrill to feel long hair curling around her head and brushing down her neck to tickle her shoulders.

At the end of the day Susan and her mother dragged themselves back to their motel. The rear of the station wagon was loaded with parcels. When they got inside the motel room it was a race to see who could kick off her high-heeled shoes and peel off her girdle first. Helen won that race and Susan obliged by massaging her mother's sore feet.

Mother and daughter then showered and dressed casually for a late supper in a nice restaurant. Later on, when it was time for bed, Helen took Susan in her arms and embraced her warmly.

"I can't remember when I've had so much fun with you," she said. "I'm beginning to forget that you're my son and not my daughter. It's crazy, but it's true."

"I have to admit that I'm having the same problem. It's almost like I've always been your daughter but you made me pretend I was a boy."

"Oh dear, dear Stanley — please forgive me for all the nasty things I said to you over the years. I guess it wasn't such a big deal after all — you wanting to dress in my clothes. Now that I think about it, I think what a fool I was to punish you."

There were tears forming in both Helen's and Susan's eyes at this point.

"Mother, what exactly did the psychiatrist tell you about me?"

"Not much really. It was a waste of money for me to go there in many ways, but I'm glad that I did. He just told me that I wasn't going to change you or cure your love affair with female attire. He said that the play was an opportunity for me to help you understand yourself better. I hope it works out for you. I've always been afraid of what others would think of you if they knew that you wore female clothing. But, here you are, going on the stage and everyone thinks it's wonderful."

The next morning Stanley dressed as Mrs. Clarkson in one of his costume outfits and went with his mother to a nearby church service. Then they drove back home and Susan did most of the driving.

As the date for the play drew near Stanley spent more and more of his time at home practicing for his part as Mrs. Clarkson. Every evening he would dress up in costume and go over his lines with his mother. Helen read the other parts and helped coach him on his movements. Stanley discovered just how much there was to learn about being a female and behaving as one. Helen made him practice walking and sitting by the hour until she was satisfied with his deportment.

The week of the play there were three dress rehearsals. Miss Shelby suggested that Stanley come to school one of those days dressed as Mrs. Clarkson. The drama coach, who had many years of experience, wanted Stanley to get over any stage fright he might feel by being dressed as a female in front of his male friends. Appearing as a girl at school for classes would be a good test of Stanley's ability to carry off the role.

"How did it go?" Helen asked when he returned home that night following the dress rehearsal.

"It was okay. I got whistled at and teased a lot in first hour and in homeroom but I just ignored them like Miss Shelby said and pretty soon they shut up and left me alone."

On opening night Mrs. Hemphill was in the center front section and the large auditorium was jammed. It was a sell-out crowd. Stanley was the hit of the show and at intermission Helen was showered with compliments about his performance and his appearance.

Stanley got three curtain calls and was presented with a large bouquet of roses at the conclusion. For four nights the play was a sell-out and set attendance records for the auditorium. The newspapers gave the production a lot of publicity and Stanley's picture ran with one of the stories.

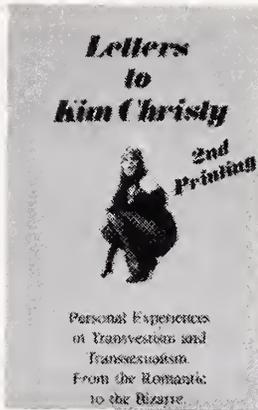

Two days after the conclusion of the senior play Stanley came home from school and found his mother waiting for him.

"We're going out for supper tonight, dear," she informed him. "I thought you might enjoy trying that new French restaurant in Conover Plaza."

"Will I have to wear a coat and tie? That's probably a pretty fancy place," Stanley observed.

"No Stanley, don't wear your coat and tie," Helen said with a broad smile. "Wear the pale blue pleated crepe dress with the lace collar. I want to take Susan out tonight — not Stanley."
