Editorial

Feminine ones,

You who have clamored for more photos of the divine Morrelle DeKeigh will have a bone thrown to your cage with the lovely six-page spread packed with color photos in this issue. Miss DeKeigh makes one of the sultriest covers we've seen in quite some time, n'est-ce pas?

And speaking of lovely, we had the opportunity to lunch with Sharon Anne Stuart recently as she was in town for business. What a thoroughly charming afternoon we had. Sharon serenaded us with enchanting tales of her rather unusual youth. We were quite stimulated and found ourselves lingering over the thoughts of her all during the rest of the day.

F.Y.I.: She wore a crisp linen, pale blue blouse with a tuxedo front tucked neatly into a cream wool skirt with matching blue silk piping around the slash pockets. It was belted in cream-colored lizard and she had medium height cream lizard pumps to match. This was all topped off by a single strand of grape-sized pearls, which she says her mother gave to her. By the way, she did not carry a bulky brown brief case, but rather a white wicker painter's box, which was both functional and so much more feminine. Sharon, from head to toe, was an ideal woman and we hope to see more of her soon.

As for the rest of you, we hope you enjoy the Family Album in our front section. Those of you not included were saved for later, not to worry. And remember, if you want your photos to appear in the magazine, be sure to send them to us.

*Lots of love for you,

Picture Perfect

Dear Kim,

Recently I've acquired two magazines of the "girlie glamour" variety. There's nothing unusual about that; in fact, such magazines will always be found strewn around my apartment. There's a pile of them beside the lounge, within easy reach during television commercials or other dull moments; they are useful for entertaining visitors, too, (and in some cases to get them nicely turned on). Fortunes have been made in supplying the market with such an essential commodity.

The two magazines I mentioned are special in that they contain pictures of attractive young ladies who both began their lives as males. One is a leading English glamour magazine; and on its front cover is a picture of the English sex change girl, Tula. Inside, there's a feature on Tula, with more photos, including full frontals. To me, this seems to be an awe-inspiring achievement! Fancy being featured in a girlie magazine . . . not only that, but Tula also appeared in a James Bond movie, with the usual bevy of other beauties. She's also appeared in television shows and on "Page 3" newspaper photos. It's enough to give us an inferiority complex! Since having her "corrective surgery" at the early age of 20, Tula has worked mainly as a model . . . alright Tula, we give up, you win, easily.

The other magazine is a local publication called Australian Playgirl. It has featured a local sex change girl, Estelle, who has caused quite a stir in this neck of the woods. Estelle works mainly as a dancer, in stage shows in Asian countries, as well as locally. She has appeared on television and in newspaper reports. The "Playgirl" spread included explicit full frontals. Estelle had her operation here in Sydney, and states that it was a complete success; she can now enjoy a full and varied sex life complete with multiple orgasms.

It appears that in the sex change operation, the penis and scrotum are opened and used as a lining in the created vagina. If this is done successfully, it results in the vagina having numerous nerve endings throughout; thus, there is the possibility of intense stimulation and erotic sensation during intercourse due to the movement of a penis in this highly responsive area.

Wow, that's quite a thought. But, I doubt that it would be any use for me getting a vagina installed . . . I'd wear it out! So, no girlie magazine explicit full frontals for me . . . I have to keep my thighs together . . . "Clitty" mustn't show and spoil the realism. (And, my slender chances of appearing in F.M.I.)

Best wishes,
Robyn

Robyn,

Good to hear from you again. I love your new "frontal" photos. Always good to hear what's happening on the other side of the globe.

Write again soon,
Kim

Long Time Fan

Dear Kim,
Seventeen years has it been?

Congratulations and Mazel Tov! I think that only Transvestia has been around half this long. You've got a definite achievement this year.

Looking through, I still have the first F.M.I. I ever bought back in 1974 — almost exactly the first day I was old enough to go into an adult bookstore. By the way, I wish that you would explain the numbering system to me. I have about three Vol. 3, #5s, which are all completely different issues.

Primarily this is to order a couple of books (see enclosed order form and check), but I am also throwing in a few pictures taken at the IFGE convention in Chicago last year. I hope that you enjoy them, although I'm a little paranoid about how fat I look.

Still, I must be doing something right because I'm told I pass rather well. At least, I have been asked what sex I am at my local showbar, which, considering that nobody who isn't male wears a dress there, is quite an achievement.

I'm afraid that I have to tell you that there is another "drag villain" film out. Riders of the Storm, starring Dennis Hopper and Michael J. Pollard revolves around a plot to make a man in drag president. I wish I could say that I hated the film, but other than its negative depiction of cross-dressing, there is nothing to object to. The film is very funny, especially some wickedly accurate send-ups of the electronic ministry, and has a beautiful classic rock soundtrack.

And then there is Nigel Pegram. Unlike most such films, Riders has cast neither a woman nor a clown in the transgendered role. Actor Nigel Pegram's drag and demeanor as a sort of male Maggie Thatcher is flawlessly passable and quite convincing. If you don't read the blurbs, it is possible to watch almost to the last scene without knowing "Willa Westinghouse" is being played by a man.

At any rate, congratulations on 17 years of the best TV publication and I wish you seventeen more even better.

Love,
Wendy

Dear Wendy,

Thanks for the congratulations and the long term patronage. I do agree that our numbering system is a little kooky. On the cover under the logo are three numbers, the last of which is the latest issue published under my complete domain. I was a contributing editor for years but only have been at the helm for these 17 years.

*Best,
Kim*

Dear Kim,

(Please excuse the writing for I was in a state of passion.)

I'd thought I'd write to you to say how much I enjoy your magazine. I'm a 25-year-old TV, & I've been crossdressing for quite a few years. I recently had an experience I'd think your readers would enjoy. One Saturday night I took a long bath & removed all my ugly body hair, except of course, for my "pussy." After the bath, I then put on makeup & gave myself a femme hairset (being a hairstylist). I then put on some lovely pink panties with garter belt & red mini skirt. Also I had a nice pink top, 4" high heels & perfume.

I'd had my ears pierced early in the week for this night. I put some "hot" pink earrings on & got in my car & took off. I was so horny seeing all the guys I passed turned on by me. I flirted of course & drove on to one of the hot night clubs. After a while of drinking "bloody Marys," a nice looking guy asked me to dance. As he was rubbing his body against mine, I was getting a tremendous hard-on. Then he started kissing me & I was in heaven, to feel how a girl feels with a man. He then invited me to his place, but I persuaded him to go to my apartment for a "nightcap." He immediately started fondling me as soon as we were in the door. I was a little scared as well as horny. I dropped to my knees & pulled his dick out & started kissing & sucking it. He, after a load down my throat, flipped me over & fucked me in the ass. At first it hurt & then I was in ecstasy. Finally, still with my "secret" yet discovered, he gave me a long hot kiss & left. I am now forever Debbie.

Love,
Debbie

*Dear Debbie,
Isn't life wonderful?*

Chromosome Query

Dear Kim,

I'm a 32-year-old TV, who desires to totally pass in public. About the only thing that would, is from the neck up. My muscles bulge. My shoulders are broad. Hips narrow. Hair is even on my shoulders. And my hands, and voice wouldn't pass.

I'm writing to you, a she-male, to learn if there is any research going on say, at Johns Hopkins' Hospital in the gender identification field? Are they trying to find ways to make a man more female? For instance, take away his male chromosome and add another female one. His chromosome makeup would be that of a woman's. Wouldn't that cause him to naturally transform? His body would probably produce a sufficient amount of estrogen, that he wouldn't need to take any shots.

I know they are trying to find what causes transvestism. Whether it's genetic or not. I've read in another TV mag. that there is a gene that hangs around the female chromosome before birth, if I understand correctly. Around birth, the gene quickly returns to the male chromosome and brings back characteristics of femininity. The male chromosome picks up on it about 4 or 5 years later. Recall when you first started dressing up. For me, it was 4. I put on my sister's tights and loved it ever since.

I am willing to give my body for research concerning transvestism or making a man more female. Soon, I am going to consult a sex therapist and tell him my desires. I'm not far from Johns Hopkins. Maybe I'll be able to go there to let them experiment on me. I know that may sound insane to you and/or your readers, but if they can give me another female chromosome, I'll be all too willing to give them my male one.

Love,
Rachael

P.S. Please suggest a book about the workings of chromosomes, hormones, and genes. Thank you.

Dear Rachael,

Thank you for writing. I truly identify with your thoughts and desires. But here I must add a statement of purpose for the magazine's sake. Although I am extremely interested in the scientific findings regarding gender research, we are primarily an entertainment magazine. We try to transmit gender information in a general way, but our purpose is to entertain and perhaps enlighten a few on all the wonderful possibilities life has to offer.

However, if you proceed with any of your plans, we would, of course, like to hear from you about your experiences. Even if you don't pursue gender reassignment, we care about you and want to know how you are getting along.

Best wishes,
Kim

November 5

Dear Kim,

Ever since my last letter to you and my photos appeared in F.M.I., I have intended to answer your request.

Trouble is that I haven't traveled outside the U.S. for more than five years and I'm sure the drag show bars and clubs there are every bit as transient as they are here in D.C. I am as guilty as the next girl for not supporting them better, but honestly with AIDS and HERPES and the myriad of other nasties a girl can catch, I stay close home and date only those men I know to be clean, safe and discreet.

Getting back to the subject, in Rio there was a club called the Charade (1976), of course all the standard places in Paris, Mr. G's in Plymouth, England, Club Paradise in Hong Kong, and the Alameda Hotel used to have FI shows in Kowloon.

Those are the only ones I can remember, sorry but my travel is too far out of date to be much value. Perhaps others saw your missive and have responded with valuable and up-to-date information.

The general climate in most overseas cities closely parallels the U.S., that is the drag clubs tend to be cloistered in less than desirable areas. Walking down the street can bring cat calls and insulting comments just as it does at home, although the incidence of propositions is infinitely higher. The only difference is in most foreign countries whatever you want to do in those specific areas is considered to be acceptable as long as it doesn't cross over to the "better" part of town. Those areas exist for people to satisfy their desires, fulfill fantasies or whatever. The law is there but doesn't bother anyone as long as you maintain your cool.

There was a drag bar in Tokyo near the Ginza; I don't know the name, it was written in Japanese characters anyway. A cab driver took me to it. In fact, that is how I found most of the places. Just ask the cab driver, some won't know, but keep trying and you will find what you want. While there, I was the main attraction, a "round eye" and 6'1". Japanese men are so polite and for whatever reason, they simply adore big women. But honestly, have you ever tried to dance with a guy 5'4"?

I have a question, it may be rhetorical, but why does it seem like all the men who frequent drag bars are short, fat, ugly, or some combination thereof?

The only people in the place as tall as I am are other TVs. I know there are lots of men over 6'2" who are interested, but they are very difficult to find.

Is it just me getting older or are all the men in the world getting younger? I'm 47 and I enjoy the company of men my own age, but the majority of those I seem to attract are 25-35.

As I'm quite sure you have heard before, when a TV is 5'5" and a size 9-10, she can pass nearly anywhere as long as voice and heavy beard are kept controlled; but at 6'1" and a size 18, it becomes a matter of more difficulty. First, anyone that size draws undue attention and speculation. What I've learned to do is stay calm, let any bad comments bounce off, dress to match where I'm going and act as though I'm a real female and let them think whatever they want. I am usually ignored at worst. Nearly all stores' people give you strange looks but seldom refuse to accept your money.

It has been a lot of years since I last saw a new Kim Christy photo layout, have you stopped being a TV/TS? Do you still have your breasts? Are you living in the female gender role? F.M.I. seems to have been very successful under your management, what are your future plans?

Again, I am sorry I couldn't be of more help to your international directory. I have to run, dear, I have a date tonight and I've promised to cook.

Sincerely,
Lynne Jackson

Dear Lynne,

Thank you for all the colorful details of your foreign exploits. I wish I had not squandered so much of my attractive youth in New York and had taken some of the many offers I had to travel to places other than the usual (Europe).

I love your attitude about remaining calm. It tends to solve most sticky situations. Also, unless there is a doctor and an examination, why not stick to the female prerogative? Regarding all those questions about my present state of affairs, I must say you are the first reader in a long time to have the nerve to ask. I applaud you for that but I'm afraid that is all you're going to get. To protect my anonymity in the business world, I must be very discreet. I am extremely complimented that you ask though.

Love,
Kim

Ex-Football Player

My dearest Kim;

Pertaining to you wanting feedback, we feel that F.M.I. is PERFECT as it is at present! I am a closet TV, 185 lbs, 6'0" tall,

"We dance and kiss constantly when I am in Drag and lately Connie insists on tying my hands behind my back which drives me crazy!"

(6'3½" in heels), muscular, ex-football player, married to a cute 5'3" blonde, 115 lbs., who loves me in drag! When we are out in public no one could imagine that I, as a construction foreman, and my cute little blonde 21-year-old wife, (I am 25), actually switch roles when we get home! I love garter belts, hi-heels, wigs and earrings, (the larger the better)! We dance & kiss constantly while I am in drag, and lately Connie insists on tying my hands behind my back which drives me crazy! Connie has named me Teresa Cassandra Del Rio, which I adore!

We feel that more homosexuality is our bag! For example, in one of your issues recently you had men in swimming suits KISSING EACH OTHER, and Connie and I remarked that it would have been so much more exciting, had these handsome men, had their attractive legs propped up on 4" high hi-heels, and quite possibly if they could have been wearing extra-LARGE EARRINGS! We would love to send you a picture of us dancing, as Connie wants to, but I would just die of the HUMILIATION!

Oh yes, Connie wants me to admit that I am Bi-sexual and that she is not! Miss Gay, Los Angeles was great!

(Also, TVs in homosexuality is our thing! + you are beautiful!

Love,
Rick (alias Teresa) & Connie

Dear Teresa,

Well, you big sissy! I think that you should send us a photo of you two right away, simply because it would humiliate you! If you're really a 'fraidy cat about us publishing it, then you should turn your faces away from the camera, but don't tease me unless you are willing to come across. Now get back in your heels and get to work!

Love,
Kim

Sally and Her Friends

My dear friend Michelle had just dropped by for a visit, and as promised, I was finishing the story of how I had evolved from boy to girl

Well, Michelle, as I had mentioned, after my sister and mother had found out that I had been “borrowing” their clothes they had sent me off to visit my young single aunt, during summer vacation, to see if she could determine my true sexual identity. And it hadn’t taken her long. Soon, I was living with her as Sally, with a lovely feminine wardrobe of my very own, and becoming more girlish and feminine every day under her constant, but expert and gentle supervision.

One day, after finally getting my full admittance that I loved to wear lingerie, dresses, nylons, heels and makeup, and I really wanted to be a girl, she had phoned Mother, over my pleading objections, and told her that I was now Sally and had decided that I wanted to be a girl with the understanding that I was to return home in three weeks to face my family at which time they would determine my future.

I was beside myself. How could I face my sister, mother, and particularly my father in skirts. But the die was cast, and I dreaded the moment!

One day, Auntie asked me to go to the grocery store to pick up some things for her. Since I had already been dressing and acting like a girl for over two months, I didn’t think twice, but I should have! As I went out the door, a boy across the street was coming right toward me. “Hi, I’m Ken Jones. You’re new to the neighborhood aren’t you?” I could hardly get the words out of my mouth. “Uh, why yes. I’m visiting my aunt during school recess.” “What’s your name?” “I’m, ah, Sally. Sally Scott.” “Well, Sally, can I walk with you for awhile?” “I . . . I guess so. I’m just going to the store for my aunt.” “Well, maybe I can carry something home for you.” I didn’t know what to do, or how to get out of it, so off we went with him asking a million questions of me.

After shopping, he carried the groceries to my aunt’s door for me and as he handed them to me he asked for a date that Friday night. I glance, “and we’ll have to get you a new tight-fitting panty girdle so there are no embarrassments.” I turned almost died, and had no idea what to say, “Well, well, I don’t know Ken, I’d have to ask my aunt.” “What’s the matter, Sally, haven’t you ever been on a date before?” “Well, sure I have. Lots of times, but Auntie likes to know where I’m going. That’s all.” “Just tell her I’m taking you to a dance. At the local high school. It’s just a summer dance for the kids.” “Well, I’ll ask her. But I can’t promise anything.” “I’ll phone you tonight for your answer. But, please make it yes!”

I was scared to death to tell Auntie what had happened. And it was long toward evening when I finally broke down and told her almost in tears.

“Why, honey, I don’t think that’s so bad. After all, you do make a very pretty girl, and you can’t blame a boy for trying. What do you think? Do you want to go to the dance with him?” “Well, I, gee, I” “You would like to go, wouldn’t you?!” “I, I, guess so. But only if you think it would be alright.” “Well, we’ll have to pick out a new dress for you,” and she gave me a sideways crimson. "But, I think it would be alright, and I want to meet the boy. I've seen Ken several times, and he looks like a nice boy." Just at that moment the phone rang, and I jumped to answer it with the caution from Auntie that young ladies shouldn't be so eager!!

Ken was beside himself when I said yes. "I'll pick you up at 8 sharp." "I'll be ready."

Shopping for my new dress was heaven, and I convinced my aunt that the pink taffeta with the white bouffant petticoat would be just dreamy for me. She also agreed to buy me some new white pumps with 4" heels that I just loved, and she insisted that I have a perm so that my hair would look nice for the dance and for my return trip home. My hair in beautiful curls almost down to my shoulders was such a thrill for me.

Auntie said I looked like a Dresden doll after she had gotten me all dressed and ready for Ken Friday evening. And when he showed up and saw me, his eyes opened wide and his mouth fell open, and I thought I had died and gone to heaven. After he had recovered and greeted my aunt, he whisked me off to his car, and once inside he leaned over and took my hand and said, "Sally, you're the cutest girl I have ever been with, and I really like you." I was ecstatic but demurely said, "Thank you Ken, I like you too."

We had a wonderful time at the dance. Ken was so handsome, and such a gentleman. I'd never been so happy.

After the dance, we had something to eat at a popular spot and Ken was beaming at the attention I was getting from his friends. He seemed very proud, and I felt like a princess with all the flattering remarks. It was just heavenly being a girl.

I was very relieved that Ken took me right home. I was feeling very weak and vulnerable, and afraid that if he had parked and made any passes, I was a goner. Instead he parked in front of Auntie's house.

"Honey, did you have a good time?" "Oh, yes Ken, I loved every minute of it." "Sally, I really think a lot of you and so I don't want to ruin anything by moving too fast. But, I want to see more of you while you're here. How about a movie tomorrow night?" "Well, I guess that would be alright." "Great, honey." Ken then helped me out of the car and walked me to the door, and then gave me the thrill of my life. He took me in his arms and kissed me passionately. "Ken, please, I, I, " and he kissed me again. And this time I kissed back. "Baby, I can't wait until tomorrow, 7 o'clock, OK?" "OK, Ken." And he left me . . . wanting to kiss him again.

Auntie was happy to see me home so early, and thought Ken was so nice, and thought it was alright to see him again since he was such a good boy.

I had a hard time sleeping that night, thinking about his kiss, wanting more, and where that might lead . . . I had a troublesome night!

The next evening my aunt greeted Ken at the door. "Oh, hello Ken, Sally will be right down. She's almost finished dressing." I had heard Ken's ring, and I hurried the finishing touches to my lips. I hoped he would like my outfit. Straight skirt with a slit that showed off a little pink lace from my slip. Sheer pink blouse that showed off a lot of a beautiful slip, dark nylons and black heels. He liked it! His face lit up when he saw me.

"Bye, Mrs. Hanson." "Goodbye Auntie." "Have fun, kids." I was walking on air again with Ken's arm around me leading me to the car. "Honey, I hope you don't mind, but I don't feel like a movie tonight. How about going for a drive? Besides I'd like to talk." "Alright, Ken. Whatever you say."

Ken drove us to a secluded spot, parked, and turned to face me. "Sally, I know I'm a little older than you and I'll be starting college next semester and some people might think it's wrong for a young girl to be with me, but honey, I'm in love with you. I have been since the first time I laid eyes on you, and I want you to be my girl. Baby, I'm crazy about you." I was speechless, and about to faint. This handsome boy wanted me for his girl, and I wasn't even a girl. Oh, what was I going to say or do? "Ken, I don't know quite what to say, I . . ." "Honey, don't you feel anything for me?" "Oh yes, Ken, I do. I really like you a lot, but . . . Oh, Ken." He had taken me to him and kissed me hungrily, with his hands feeling my silken legs to the tops of my nylons. I pushed his hands down and backed away breathless, "Please, Ken . . ." "Baby, I want you so badly . . .," and his hands were all over me. I was succumbing to his passion, and held him tight as his tongue flicked in and out of my mouth. "Ken, I love you . . ."

He could no longer contain himself. I could not contain him. His hands again went under my skirt. "No, Ken, wait . . ." "I can't wait, honey," and he took my hand and placed it on his bulging crotch. I felt as if I were losing my mind as I reached for his belt buckle, and then I had his huge throbbing cock in my little hands gently massaging it, and as though guided by some outside force, my lips sought the swollen, velvet head and moved up and down the stiff shaft in rhythm with his movement in a fiery passion that resulted in an eruption of cum so violent I thought my head would explode!!!

"Oh Ken, I'm so ashamed. What will you ever think of me?" I began to cry as I fiddled with my lipstick trying to get myself together. "Baby, I'm so in love with you nothing will ever part us. I want to see you every night from now on, and when you go home, I want to meet your folks, and tell them after I graduate, we'll be married." "Oh, Ken."

Sally, dear, I hate to interrupt, but I just have to run. I love your story and I can't wait to hear what happened when you went home and your father saw you for the first time with a perm, and wearing a dress and heels. And, especially what he did when he found out you had a boyfriend!

Oh, by the way, I'll be sure to tell Cheryl to write and that you had misplaced her address. Bye, see you soon.

The Miss Continental U.S.A. Contest

We landed in Chicago the day before the pageant to be greeted by lovely fall weather. The air was bristling with excitement and promise of a two-day extravaganza hosted by Jim Flynt and the stellar Baton Lounge. The first night of the contest was to be held in the Baton Lounge, surveying almost 30 contestants. Then the narrowing down process begins for the next night: The Main Event. There, ten contestants vied for the coveted title of Miss Continental U.S.A.

Above left: Vicki Vox stunned the talent judges with her number, opening as Diana Ross and then shedding her cape to reveal Michael Jackson underneath. She was a thriller. Below left: A smug contestant. Above right: Chanté was such a close second that it would seem to us to be a tie. She was both talented and beautiful beyond belief. Her dance and song number was quite rigorous and included eight men and three other ladies. Stupendous. Below right: What shoulders my dear!

At right: Kelly Lauren prepared two separate talent entries for both nights, a true transvestite overachiever. Her first evening at the Baton, she presented an adorable version of "Broadway Baby" with all that wonderful white hair. The main event was her mini-production of Phantom, complete with dressing room, canoe and fog. Unfortunately it did not photograph as spectacularly as it played. Below left: The goddess-like Dana Douglas making one of her many farewell performances as the reigning Miss Continental. Above right: Ginger Grant was outrageous as always. Below right: Even more beads!

Above right: Amber Richards had talent and class which won her a fourth runner-up award. Below right: Paula St. Clair had a knockout dress that we felt was underrated. It was solid sequins in a very flattering cut with the most extraordinary patterns all over. Above right: Charlene Rose sang "Ring dem Bells" with such contagious high energy that the whole audience went wild for a reprise. Below right: Whitney Carlisle did her astounding Marilyn and brought the audience to a haunted hush in awe of her likeness.

Above left: Silvia Del Rio charmed us with her full scale production a la Josephine Baker. She has a thickly sensuous look that she has taken such good advantage of. Great style and personality. Below left: Morgan displays her evening gown that was nearly not there! This was the most revealing gown of the evening without being offensive. This dress was perfect for the occasion of theatricalized femininity. Above right: Chante was enveloped in red velvet petals for the gown competition. A wonderful dress, but too fussy for the occasion. It could have cost her the contest. Below right: Kelly Lauren in her first night's gown for competition. This girl had two of everything! This gown is not a super knockout, she saved that for the next night, but it doesn't look the least bit silly as the dress above.

MORRELLE DE KEIGH

Little is known about this stunning Kim Christy star except her film credits. She-Male Wrestlers, She-Male Whorehouse and She-Male Reformatory are just a few. We featured her on both our cover and in our photo set selection to an unprecedented response from you. Those who have worked with her on the set have spoken highly of her. She is always fun to be with and her delightful giggle has kept the long hours of work from becoming monotonous. But little else is known about her. We can only suppose

And what we suppose is a mysterious past in some far port of call. Perhaps Morocco. We do know that her father was Dutch and her mother Italian. That accounts for both her name and her extraordinary looks. But what about her teenage years? A convent? The streets? Well-kept in the Italian Alps? Who knows? All we know is that we like what we see.

One of the Girls

By Marsha
Manley

I was overdue in a restroom when we finished our meal so Louise W. and Mallory stood guard on the ladies' room at the restaurant while I quickly relieved myself. This prompted quite a discussion in the car on the way back to the plant.

Back at the office Dottie K. asked me to deliver some documents to another office located in a separate building on the company complex. This meant walking nearly a quarter of a mile.

"Do you mind doing it?" Dottie asked me in front of Mallory. "I can send Diana if you like."

She was apparently concerned about me walking such a long distance in high heels and a tight skirt. I assured her I would do it.

"Maybe I ought to go with him to keep him out of trouble," Mallory offered. "You never know about those guys in the Engineering Department. They might make a pass at our pretty little receptionist."

Dottie agreed and Mallory went along with me. We got into our coats to go outside and I tied on my scarf as it was windy outside.

"I really mean it Marshall," Mallory said to me when we were on our way. "You look quite attractive dressed that way. Men look at attractive women and think evil thoughts. Doesn't that worry you a teeny bit?"

"I know, but surely we don't have to worry about getting raped here at work," I responded. "I can't imagine anyone attacking me here."

"So, you're not worried then?"

"No, but I'm glad you came along just the same," I replied and smiled. Mallory is a fine person and a charming companion.

"Do you mind if I ask you a really personal question?"

From past experience I had a good idea what was on her mind and I wasn't disappointed. I nodded my consent to suffer her inquisition.

"Are you gay?"

"No, I'm not gay, but I must be a transvestite or something," I replied.

There was silence after this for a few moments.

"Well, I was just curious about it. I guess I shouldn't have asked you such a thing. Will you forgive me? I can be such a nosy bitch at times."

"No, it's all right. I don't mind you asking me questions at all," I assured her.

"In that case," Mallory continued, "what are you going to show up in tonight?"

Mallory was clever enough to realize that I would not be content to come to the Halloween party in a skirt-suit.

I described my evening dress in detail for Mallory and made her promise not to reveal my plans to our co-workers. I wanted to surprise them.

We delivered the documents to the Engineering Department without incident and returned to our office building. On the way back we stopped in a ladies' restroom and went in together as though it was the normal thing to do.

I spent the rest of the afternoon at the reception desk typing up some reports and had a great time. Some of the girls in other offices heard about me and found excuses to stick their heads in to get a look at the bookkeeper dressed up as a woman. But I was really no more of a spectacle than any of the other employees who were clad in a great variety of costumes.

I called Rita to come early to pick me up. I wanted to introduce her to Margaret B. in particular and to the others in our office. Rita came at 4:45 p.m. and had a chance to meet everyone just before closing time.

"So this is Marshall's big sister who turns boys into girls," Mallory quipped.

"I'm afraid so," Rita responded. "Has he been a good girl?" she added with a grin.

"He's been so good," Mallory answered, "that we're going to promote Diana and keep Marshall as our receptionist. Of course, he'll need a new wardrobe. How about it Marshall?"

I declined Mallory's gambit with a smile.

"I don't think so. It's too much trouble getting fixed up like this every day. I'll take my job and mens' clothes thank you."

I was lying through my teeth. Nothing would have pleased me more than to have to make such a switch for the good of the department.

Dottie K.'s dinner party before the Halloween bash was set for 7:00 p.m. The Halloween party was scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m. but we planned to arrive late around 9:00 p.m. or whenever we finished our meal which was to be served in a restaurant right there in the hotel.

Rita had brought everything I would need along with her so we went directly to the hotel and checked into our room. I removed my makeup and jumped into the shower. A quick shave and I was ready to be transformed from male to female once more.

Rita did my evening makeup and helped me dress in my underpinnings and gown. My evening ensemble began with a wispy pair of black hip-hugger panties followed by a black waist cinch with satin panels and long, dangling ribbon garters. My hose were a pair of sheer black nylons with a backseam and a rhinestone butterfly sewn into each stocking just above the ankle on the outside.

I had taped my breasts to gather the excess flesh and push it upwards so as to create the illusion of natural cleavage. The gown I would be wearing is what they refer to as a bustier style. It is strapless and depends in part on the configuration of the bosom to hold it in place.

Rita had helped me sew a pair of weighted falsies into the stiffly boned cups of the bustier's bodice. The falsies filled out the cups nicely but remained out of sight. With what little bosom I had in front pushed upward and outward by the surgical tape I appeared to have grown a real pair of breasts. Rita had devised a way of taking the gown's bodice in a notch so that it would be even tighter across my torso and reduce the chance of having it slip down. Still I knew I might have to tug it back into place from time to time.

A single petticoat fitted around my waist. It was black and the lower portion of it consisted of several alternating layers of crinoline. It was what they call a cancan petticoat.

The gown featured a bodice of black chiffon gathered and sewn over a stretch fabric, probably spandex, and shaped with boning like a corset. Rhinestone butterflies were embroidered into the chiffon across the front of the bodice.

The skirt was also of filmy, black and silvery chiffon, layered and full with a three-tiered flounce and a modified bustle hanging at the back. The hem ended an inch or so above the knees — just enough skirt to cover the cancan petticoat underneath.

The back of the bodice closed with a hidden zipper and a series of hooks and eyes that held it snugly around my torso.

On my feet were a pair of open-toed evening pumps with five inch high heels and silk bows across the instep. The shoes were also black.

I wore a zircon choker, dangling zircon earrings, a single bangle bracelet and black lace stretch gloves with open fingers. I also had a big dinner ring set with fake stones to wear on my left hand.

I wore a different wig which Rita had prepared that afternoon. It matched my own hair color closely and Rita pinned it on and arranged it with some of my own hair pulled through the wig's cap for a very realistic look. She fixed it in a sophisticated, upswept style with a silk ribbon bow pinned to one side.

When all of this was in place Rita devoted ten minutes or so to making up my shoulders and my cleavage. Using some blusher Rita created shadows and areas of light so as to enhance the illusion that I had a real bust. The trick worked beautifully as I appeared to have a much larger bosom. My shoulders and arms were also lightly made up and dusted with translucent powder. Then I was doused with some expensive perfume and pronounced ready to be the belle of the ball.

It was not easy to tear myself away from the mirror in our hotel room. I was positively ecstatic about the way I looked in my evening frock. I think every girl must get that special thrill when she is dressed up for the first time in fancy evening attire. And this was really my first time in an honest-to-goodness evening dress.

I had purchased a little evening bag to carry with me. It was so tiny all I could get into it was a tube of lipstick, a vial of perfume, some money and a lace handkerchief.

Rita had been invited to join us at Dottie K.'s dinner party and was also invited to the Halloween party afterward but she was tired and decided to stay in the room and relax.

I was already a bit late for the dinner party so I thanked Rita for all she had done and went off to find the rest of our department. When I got on the elevator to go downstairs it was jammed with people who had to scrunch up to make room for the lady in the short, billowing skirt. Ordinarily I would have been terrified to get on an elevator like that as a man dressed in women's clothing. But, it was Halloween and it was all perfectly legitimate. And besides I felt so confident about my appearance. I got some long looks, of course, particularly from the women who were dressed in normal attire but no one said anything.

I found the restaurant on the hotel's mezzanine level. It was a fancy place that served gourmet French food. I told the hostess that I was looking for the K. party.

"Oh yes," she said with a knowing smile, "they just arrived and told me to keep an eye out for you. You look absolutely lovely."

Dottie K. had apparently considered it necessary to inform the hostess that the dinner would include a man dressed in women's attire.

There were a number of other company employees wearing costumes eating in the establishment along with other customers who had nothing to do with our party. I followed the hostess back through a maze of tables to a private dining area. As we proceeded I was well aware of the glances and stares I was receiving from other patrons. I was on my best feminine behavior, mincing along on the thick carpet in my high heels, arms bent at the elbow, handbag clutched in front, skirts swishing around my knees and a sweet smile on my bright red lips.

The hostess left me with Dottie K. who took it upon herself to introduce me to all of the husbands and boy-friends. The presence of men dictated a different code of conduct for my colleagues who greeted me in a more reserved but still enthusiastic manner. The men had all been told that I was a wolf in sheep's clothing but they may not have been prepared, judging from the looks I received, for the realism of my impersonation.

I was determined to play the female role to the hilt and took their hands as a woman would with a limp wrist. These formalities were accomplished without much ado and I took a seat between Dottie K. and Mallory. Louise and her fiance were seated on the other side of Mallory. Louise and Edward were dressed up as a pair of space aliens this time.

A drink was ordered for me and I began to enter into the conversations. We had a wonderful meal but the service was slow and we did not get into the ballroom where the party was being held until nearly 10:00 p.m. I partied until 3:00 a.m. and then reluctantly went back to the room to turn Cinderella back into a pumpkin.

A lot of interesting comments were made to me in the course of the evening. I can't possibly recount them all but it is worth recalling a few things that were said.

I spent a good portion of the evening with Mallory as she was there alone, her husband being away on a business trip. She had abandoned the Superwoman costume in favor of a fortune teller's get-up. As we waited for our desserts to come Mallory leaned over and whispered in my ear.

"You know, you really make a stunning woman. Everyone's absolutely envious. There's no way I could wear that dress and look as good in it. It's a crime you weren't born female."

I laughed in response.

"I'm happy to be a man," I told her. "But, it's fun to cross over once in a while and see how the other half lives."

Alcohol can loosen more than one tongue and sometimes things are said that otherwise wouldn't be said.

At one point Edward and I were left at a table in the ballroom as others danced. Edward, who had been drinking whiskey sours, looked at me in the most peculiar way.

"Louise is in love with you," he blurted.

I could only laugh nervously in reply and shake my head.

"No, I mean she loves any guy that dresses up like a girl. She wants me to do it all the time, but I refused. Last year I did it. This year I said, 'No way, no way.' No way am I going to get dressed up as a female."

"I understand," I said reassuringly.

"Well, it's okay for you," he continued. "You look, well, you look great. But I looked stupid, you know."

I wondered if Edward's refusal to crossdress for Louise was going to be a problem between them in the future. With all of the men in the world who would love to find a woman who would like them to crossdress Louise would have to find Edward, who obviously wanted no part of it. It is part of the irony of human relationships. We almost never seem to match up perfectly with one another.

I had many more compliments from various people. It felt wonderful to be dressed as a female among business associates and friends and to be accepted so warmly and enthusiastically by everyone. There were a few men and women who seemed uncomfortable with the idea and who responded awkwardly when introduced. Not everyone is secure in the presence of a crossdressed male. I found myself wondering just what treatment I would have received and what the responses would have been if it were not Halloween but rather some other occasion. I suspect I would have been rejected and even ridiculed by some of my colleagues — but Halloween allows us to put away taboos and remove the barriers to conventional behavior. Sometimes I wish we celebrated Halloween every week — better yet, every day.

We slept in the next morning and had brunch in the room before checking out. I dressed up in a casual skirt and blouse. Rita and I did some shopping before returning home.

On Sunday I put on my skirt suit again and went to church with Rita. Then we went out for a bite to eat afterward and did some more shopping before Rita left to go home.

When she had left I got a little depressed. I knew that my weekend as Marsha was coming to an end. I toyed with the idea of showing up at the office on Monday in a dress and heels but I knew that wouldn't be acceptable. I cried myself to sleep that night.

Not much was said at the office Monday morning about the party. We did gab about it at coffee break and Mallory couldn't resist making a remark to me.

"I thought for sure you'd be wearing that skirt suit again, Marshall, and your high heels. What's wrong — did you chicken out on being a woman?"

I smiled wryly as the others laughed. If she only knew.

I think it was about two weeks later that the plumbing in the men's restroom broke down and all of the males on the floor had to borrow the ladies' restroom. A sign was made up to hang on the outside so everyone would know when the facilities were in use and by which sex.

I was waiting in the hallway one morning for Margaret B. to finish her business so I could use the restroom when Mallory came and pulled me inside with her.

"What are you doing?" I cried in alarm. "Margaret's in here now!"

"It's okay, dearie, you're one of the girls. Margaret won't mind some company."
