EDITORIAL

I hope I'm not boring you with my constant display of "Photos From The Past." I really enjoy this particular set we picked for you this issue. It reminds me of a marvelous movie I saw recently called "Scandal." "Scandal" is about the Profumo case of the early 60s in Great Britain and Mandy Rice-Davies is played by a new face, Bridgette Fonda. Miss Fonda must have done great research with us kind of girls because her delight and sensuousness with which she dons her clothing and make-up is pure transvestite glory.

Actually the whole movie was like a flashback for me watching all the girls back stage and the eyeliner and the teased up hairdos. I loved the whole thing and recommend it for the art direction alone.

Also in this issue we have hot stills from one of our she-male solo videos of Angel. If you are interested in ordering any of these half-hour tapes you can find information in the catalog at the back of the book.

Things to look forward to: Summer, (the season, not necessarily the model), Chrysis (the model, not necessarily the state), and more of the feminine fun that we strive to bring into your lives.

*Love to all,
Kim Christy*

& EXITS

Photos from the fabulous heyday of dressing up.

We hope you enjoyed these jewels from our treasure trove. This was a simpler time for drag. The illusion was created with broader strokes and fewer numbers had access to the miracles of modern science that are so prevalent today. The actual intricacies of style have changed over the years but isn't it interesting to see how similar these queens are to the envied standards of today. It's as if in the collective unconscious there exists an icon of femininity that remains timeless and eternal.

My Dearest Miss Christy:

Even though it was a perfunctory note regarding a magazine I have ordered, I was highly pleased to see that you affixed your signature to the letter I received yesterday. Just knowing that you took a brief moment to do so, darling Kim, made me happy.

Getting your autograph, even in such a mundane manner, is fantastic and gives me a grand total of two famous autographs. The other one I have (which my parents obtained for me some years ago) is of Muhammad Ali, so I can now say with pride that I have the signatures of two world champions: The Greatest and The Loveliest!

As the uncrowned Queen of queens, Miss Christy, I thought you might like to read a bit about my life as a periodic transvestite. I can visualize you leaning back in your soft office chair, smiling slightly and so secure in your absolute and awesome femininity, as you read my letter and so many others written to one of the most beguiling and bewitching femmes of our time.

The great majority of us are nowhere near your league, Kim honey, when it comes to looks, deportment, feminine knowledge, and pure personal sexual magnetism, so, in my case, only my meager words will have to do. I am, however, a daily newspaper reporter, so I know a thing or two about writing.

Speaking of a thing or two, how are yours doing, Kim?

Getting back to my point, let me say that I am almost 39 years old and have been a TV since my teens, having been self-seduced by discovery of a sexy black garter belt and a hot pair of black, seamed stockings in my mother's closet. Naturally, her clothes (including panties, my major clothing lust) became my clothes and set me off (in more ways than one) on a life of slavery to the ideal of men becoming women.

Since those days of wonderful discovery, I have spent literally thousands of dollars to indulge my transvestite compulsion, that unquenchable inner urge to let Jocelyn (my female self) flower and strut her stuff. I own not only a lot of shoes and clothes (including a bag containing 200 or more pairs of panties), but also about 1,000 TV books and magazines, of which numerous copies contain photos of you, Kim.

I do not dress up often (perhaps, twice a year now), but I try to be a sexpot when I do, with short skirts or tight pants, ruffled or sheer panties, a perfect female impersonator bra, varied nylons (most often, fishnet styles which hide the leg hair I never dared to remove), and one of several wigs. I do not pass close scrutiny, so I avoid contacts except for fleeting walk-bys.

What I most like to do as Jocelyn is flirt and tease at a safe distance, a few examples of which follow:

(1) When dressed, I sometimes go to a medium-sized city in a nearby state (I live in Indiana) and pose myself seated on a sidewalk bench with my skirt rucked up “accidentally” on one armrest so that the full expanse of stockinged leg and as much of my panties are easily displayed. I then sit and read quietly while sneaking peeks from under the bangs of my auburn-tressed wig at drivers who stop at a stoplight and gawk at the pretty young thing who is “unknowingly” showing off so much. That gives me a real thrill, Kim, because men are always out to see all they can of women's hidden charms.

(2) Once, in the same city, I was decked out in a white and blue polka-dotted mini-skirt and a super-sexy pair of red, white, and blue panties designed to be worn and shown during square dances. I had opened the trunk of my car on a shopping center parking lot and was carefully bending over to look inside, but I was being very careful to show my hot, pantied ass instead of trying to cover it! That's the fun part. Anyway, a carload of guys slowly drove by and wolfwhistled at the doll who was being such a bad girl as she let nasty males stare up her skirt and see almost every square inch of my patriotic panties. It was one of the few times I've been whistled at, Kim, and it was truly exciting. I turned to the guys, smiled widely, gave a girlish wave and a lovely kiss, then bent all the way over from the waist to smooth out an imaginary wrinkle in the ankle of my fishnet stockings. The guys whistled even louder before driving off and I felt like the happiest, prettiest TV slut in the world.

(3) For a while in the relatively small city in which I live, I would dress up in scandalously skimpy outfits and parade the streets along a major highway route through town. Many trucks roar through our fair city, so from two to four in the morning, I had plenty of long-haul truckers who were lugging more than one load (if you know what I mean . . . and you do, don't you?). Some of the outfits I put on were truly

the few times

indecent, which, of course, is exactly why I loved wearing them. They included a slightly long turtleneck sweater which I converted into an utterly obscene “dress,” a specially-made adult baby dress which came only a few inches past my waist and left nothing to the imagination, some leather and nylon hotpants, and even some old blue jeans which I modified by cutting them right under the rear and front pockets, thus leaving plenty of room for my jutting ass to wiggle and jiggle for any horny trucker. I’d wave and smile at every truck and quite often I’d see the same trucker drive by two or three times. Several guys tried to pick me up, but I stayed away and maintained my teasing, tempting, taunting transvestite illusion. The best night, by far, was when I literally became a traffic-stopper. That term is often used, but I never saw it happen until the night when seven or eight tractor-trailer rigs slowed to almost a crawl right in a row to watch me walk slowly by, gyrating on my stilted heels, my big fake tits shaking, smiling, blowing kisses, and squirming my body and my bottom for the enjoyment of every driver. I don’t know how many of those guys lost their loads that night, but it didn’t take long for me to blow mine!

Well, so much for all that, Kim. It’s not much compared to the incredible life you (and others) have led and are leading, but it’s about all I can get away with.

In regard to your “Letters to Kim Christy” series, please keep ’em coming (no pun intended) and keep running pictures of all the girls who write. I do think it’s better to place the photos with each article instead of at the back of each booklet, as was the case with volume three.

The letters are all interesting, but I especially remember the fantastic one from Helen of the Boston area in volume two and, naturally, anything by that fabulous Aussie pussy Robyn! (In a related vein, I was very, very taken by the story told by Marsha

in the proper TV niche under the tutelege of a dominant

in volume two of “True Stories of TVs.”) Pass on my love to them all and my admiration for everyone with more courage than I to indulge in the wonderful art of make-believe femininity.

I know you don't need to be reminded to stay your lovely best, Kim, so I will just say that I love you and all you stand for . . . especially when you're standing in “Fuck Me” shoes and dressed your sexy finest!!!

Adoringly, longingly yours,
Jocelyn

Dear Jocelyn,

What a naughty little slut you are, getting those big hairy men all worked up and then strutting off into the night. Why I think little teasy whores like you ought to lean over my knee for a good old-fashioned spanking, don't you? I'd yank your mini-skirt up over your hips and beat your bouncing cheeks through your panties until you begged me to stop, and then I would yank those frilly things down to your knees and really burn your cheeks. Maybe we could have a few of those truck drivers watching while I did it, HUH?

*Be good,
Kim*

Rachel's Story

Dear Ms. Christie:

As an ardent fan of your long-lived publication and a long-time closet practitioner of the TV art, I wanted to convey my appreciation for the added encouragement and enthusiasm which you have added to the pursuit of the TV objectives. Again, just as your publication has given us all the opportunity to share various ideas and techniques with our sisters, I thought I would write my contribution to the total effort.

Closet TVism is as good a place to start as any. However, I do believe that one misses the best parts remaining in that closet and I certainly do recommend that when the first opportunity to move out to the fore, that you do so with vigor. Such a move will certainly impose a greater degree of discipline on you, but in return, the rewards to yourself will be proportionate.

My early experiences began when I gathered up the nerve to visit a gay bar although I am not gay, per se. After a passage of time, I was allowed to join a private scene club. The Club served as a common ground for practitioners of all aspects of the 'ther than straight' community. I did not dress during this early period but was more of a voyeur within the club scene. I observed the gay male and lesbian activities in the public and plush areas of The Club. In addition, the presence of exhibitionists, swingers on the cruise, dominants and their submissives, TV/TS's at various stages made things confusing as well as interesting. Since informality of dress prevailed, the mode of dress ranged from the jeans/sweat shirt to the obviously purposeful come-on type garb, to the stylized bunny costumes or even the harem type see-throughs on the club employees. Not in all cases could the TV's be read but the pairings helped to identify the GG's in male garb freely romancing their ultra-feminine-looking guests or at the other extremes, the leather clad biker bunch where unisex leathers were the vogue. But in the end, everything found its own level and I found myself in the proper TV niche under the somewhat tutelege of a dominant female. Obviously it was her more aggressive nature which prevailed.

Over the next several months, I did become a part of the dominant's household stable. My TVism was greatly accelerated and I found that with the constant need to apply myself and the enforced exposure supplemented with the continuing critique, my demeanor and comportment was quickly altered in the feminine direction. Although I considered myself non-passable, I was put to work at The Club, performing the menial chores associated with its boutique which permitted us to shop unmolested. But gaining the confidence by knowing that there were indeed others who were in the same learning stage heightened my interest and resolve to become more sociably involved. It was the constant company of the GG's who were sympathetic and critical of my efforts which greatly accelerated my conversion to the feminine life.

So to sum things up for all of you who would aspire to come out of the closet, I would suggest routine household tasks. Besides, they hurt my feet and do nothing for my legs.

And a GG could make you much more comfortable during your shopping excursions. An assist is always welcome when perusing through the bras and garter belts and tap pants and bustiers and corselets. And have you seen the full range of the new colors and how high the thighs are cut on those delicious items in the lingerie boutiques as compared to the standard brands carried in the operation. But such functions as clearing tables, straightening up, and the like subjected me to public exposure from time to time. The Club employees, who were also my household sisters, doubled as the stage entertainers as well as to create a more friendly atmosphere within The Club, if you know what I mean. We were dressed appropriately for our tasks which really translates to "it always pays to advertise."

It was about the same period that I had also joined a local support group but actually, the only thing that I gained from the association was the name of a local beauty salon which did make-overs and the location of a lingerie department stores? Do you know that wigs improve your appearance so much more when they are styled properly and augmented with falls and ribbons, and related jewelry; are you still going within the pencil-thin eyebrows, and candy apple red lipstick, rouge, and nail colorings; and are you still Betty Booping your eyes and lips? Come on now, a little help can do wonders for you. I went outside and improved myself immensely as well as giving myself a lot more confidence.

And when you pose for those photographs, whether self-taken or by a friend, do you stand for that formal full frontal shot with your arms dangling down to your knees

D-cups nor do they have waists which can be cinched down to a 24-inch, nor does everyone carry their bucket around with them all day. Look at the females in the shopping malls and you will find that dressing like them would be too unisex for us all.

I note that the pictures which now appear in the user submitted section are of a better quality than that which appears in the ads. Obviously, a GG can assist you greatly in assuming the proper and most graceful poses and above all, avoid the more obscene shots which are better reserved for the other type publications.

No matter how you look at it though, a brief but continuing relationship with a dominant can be of a great assist to you. A versatile dominant can teach you a great deal in a short time assuming that you are able to convey your interests in the very early stages of your relationship. Judicious evaluation is absolutely essential but oftentimes, something may be better than nothing. And then again, it could also be the other way. I was fortunate. I learned a great deal and had my horizons expanded at the same time. But let me tell you, I came out of my closet fast, learned my lessons even faster, ridded myself of my old-fashioned male thoughts even still faster, and never forgot a thing taught to me.

So, if you need a support group, try for one before you take on a group. You'll learn a lot, you'll have your horizons expanded greatly, but let me tell you, I wish I were in the learning stage again.

Love,
Rachel

French Maid

Dear Kim:

Thanks for putting together such a great magazine. I eagerly look forward to each issue, so I can check out the beautiful "ladies."

I particularly like the "Letters to the Editor" section, where you get not only great stories and comments from other readers, but some of the best photos. My panties are off to Micki, that gorgeous beauty from Pittsburgh, who was featured in your most recent issue. Was she pretty!

Anyway, I've been dressing for a long time, and adore beautiful lingerie and ladies' clothes. I lean toward silky, frilly dresses, and complete lingerie. Garterbelts and stockings are the biggest turn-on, particularly when you have high heels on. It all started when I was a young boy, and my mother couldn't get a sitter to stay with me when she was supposed to be at her sister's bridal shower. My mother said she had no choice but to take me to this "ladies only" affair, and when I protested and started talking back rudely and making trouble, my mother said not only was I going, but I was going to be dressed as a girl for the occasion. She said if I ever acted badly again, I'd be in a dress all the time. Since I was small for my age, she had no trouble putting me into a yellow party dress with white lace petticoats. I had white lace on the socks, black patent heels, and tiny white lace panties. Then she put makeup on me and combed my hair out. When I saw myself, I nearly died, but at the same time loved it. I was so embarrassed in front of all the other ladies, while inside kind of loving the attention. I guess that's why I love to be all dressed up, with the possibility always there of getting caught and publically humiliated!

I do go out occasionally, just a drive in town to do a little window shopping. I never go too far away from my car, because even though I'm quite passable, it's a little awkward being 6 feet tall in spike heels. Often I'll just go to a crowded parking lot, and park in the far corner. My heart pounds when I reach for the door handle and open the door, swinging my nylon legs out into the night air. My skirt is hiked up so that you could catch a glimpse of my silky stocking tops and garterbelt. I might walk around just a bit between the rows of cars, just loving the sound of my high heels clicking! Then I might get back in my car and "relieve" myself, imagining I'm a pretty lady giving herself to her man on a date.

I'm sending along some photos, in some of my favorite lingerie. Any French Maid lovers out there?

Anyway, I thought I'd say hello and thanks again. Bye for now!

Love,
Cindy

"It's still a little awkward being six feet tall in high heels."

Dear Cindy,

My how stimulating! I certainly enjoyed your photos as did every one else in the office, but alas until people start getting the magazine with our new model release requirements (see page 39) we won't be able to use any photos in the letters section. Hopefully, this is only a temporary measure. I also liked your account of being dressed as a little girl. The Sissy Times, Sharon Anne Stuart's lovely publication also deals with petticoat humiliation and I'm sure if you aren't already reading this fun journal, that you would love it.

Fill in a model's release and write back soon!

The Many Faces of Kim

Why I Am A Sissy

By Harriet Horne

I was born in Savannah, Georgia in 1926, the third son and the seventh child of my parents. My father's family owned a railroad and my mother came from a wealthy merchant's family. We were white, well-to-do Southern aristocracy. My father had little to do with the railroad but spent his time managing investments and developing real estate. My mother busied herself with church work, women's clubs and charity. I was the youngest child and arrived quite late in my mother's fertility, so late in fact, that it was embarrassing to her but flattering to my father who was some twenty years older than she and presumed to be no longer capable of making a woman pregnant.

By the time I arrived on the scene, my parents had tired of the drudgery of raising children. My father had his business obligations and could be found most often on the golf course. My mother was occupied with her clubs and charities and consigned me to a Negro nursemaid to be raised in my infancy.

I inherited my mother's beauty and bone structure along with her eyes, her curly hair and her ivory complexion. Carrying out my mother's wishes, Lena, my nursemaid, dressed me in the fashion of a baby girl and I was treated as such. This departure from normal practice may have been my mother's reaction to losing one of my brothers who had been killed while serving in the U.S. Marine Corps. In any event she was quite protective of me as I grew up and sheltered me a great deal as one would a daughter. My father remained distant and uninvolved in my upbringing.

At the age of four I was still crowned with curls and clad in smocks and dresses. I was very slow to toilet train. I sucked my thumb religiously. I was bashful and customarily hid under furniture when company called. I played with dolls and cuddled a teddy bear at night in bed. I cried easily and was terribly spoiled. Without question, at age four, I was already a sissy.

My enrollment in a private kindergarten demanded that my curly locks be shorn and my frocks exchanged for rough trousers. I bawled hysterically the day they cut my hair and when the horrid trousers were buckled around my waist, I ran and hid in the shed. When school began I was incorrigible at first and had to be sent home. I threw tantrum after tantrum until my mother consented in utter frustration to allow me to wear my little dresses at home provided I wore pants to school. For nearly two years I was allowed to maintain a double wardrobe of pants and shirts for school and jumpers and dresses for home. Then, when I was nearly seven my father put his foot down and decreed that I was no longer to be dressed as a girl and my precious frocks were given to the church rummage sale.

I already secretly wished that I could become a girl and I regularly fantasized about dressing in the frilly attire that little Southern belles wore even in the darkest days of the Great Depression. The stock market crash of 1929 and its aftermath did diminish my father's wealth considerably but we were still well-off in comparison with many families in Savannah. In 1933 we sold our home and moved into a less expensive but still very respectable bungalow. In the course of that move I became aware of some boxes that contained clothing discarded by my mother and my sisters over the years, clothing too nice to be consigned to the church rummage sale, but too out-of-fashion to wear any longer. These boxes became my secret wardrobe and I regularly stole off to the attic to quietly play dress up with these lovely old garments, none of which fit me, but the touch of the fabrics and the bright colors gave me that familiar warm feeling of feminine identity that we all know so well as sissies.

When I was nine, one of my female cousins got married and the ceremony was one of the social events of the year in Savannah society. I served as the ring bearer and was paired with another female cousin who was the flower girl. She also was nine.

In keeping with tradition, I was attired in a red velvet page boy's costume with knee breeches and a cut-away coat worn over a ruffled blouse trimmed at the neck and cuffs with lace frills. I wore a little three-cornered hat trimmed with lace and ribbon and smart kid leather gloves on my hands. Even more exciting than these sissy garments was the pair of transparent white silk stockings that sheathed my legs and the corset that the stockings were gartered to which encircled my tiny waist with a firm unyielding embrace. On my feet were an unmistakably feminine pair of girl's patent pumps with heels an inch-and-a-half high.

When I was first introduced to this outfit which had been made from a pattern by my aunt I cried uncontrollably. My smiling mother and

"It was an utterly captivating experience to be laced into a woman's corset."

aunt took my tears as a signal of my embarrassment to be attired in such a sissy fashion. In a way they were right. I was embarrassed to be sure but I was also secretly thrilled to see myself looking so feminine, not to mention the utterly captivating experience of being laced into a woman's corset.

On the day of the wedding my hair was curled with an iron and my face was prettied with rouge and lipstick. My female partner was similarly dressed in the manner of a fancy doll and we marched down the aisle together drawing a subdued chorus of oohs and aahs from the large congregation that had assembled for the wedding. Afterwards there was a large reception and I must have had my picture taken a thousand times.

In spite of my own effeminate attire, I still held a degree of envy for my female counterpart who after all was wearing a velvet dress and luscious sounding petticoats with lace frills. Evidently she was not immune to feelings of envy either. For some reason she wanted to try on my costume and begged her mother to arrange it. As the wedding reception ran its course after the bride and groom departed for a honeymoon in Atlanta the two of us were summoned by my aunt and taken to her hotel room where our costumes were exchanged. I became the flower girl and my cousin had a fling at being a page boy.

We were ushered back to the reception where we were greeted and fawned over for another hour by half-drunken relatives. It was a positively electrifying experience for me to be displayed that way while attired in such a feminine costume. I was called "precious" and "pretty" and told that I "should have been a girl." More pictures were taken and I have them in my album still today.

As I grew up my mother came to recognize that I was effeminate and lacked the aggressive, athletic nature my brothers had possessed. I was encouraged in music and studied voice and took piano lessons. I also aspired to be a dancer and took ballet lessons from the age of twelve to eighteen when it became obvious that I was not destined to earn a living in toe shoes. Still, that training was invaluable to me in gaining control of my body and served to satisfy my longings for femininity during my adolescence. There is nothing so feminine that a boy can do than take ballet lessons, I believe. Of course, my sissy ways and effeminate appearance made me the butt of many a joke among my schoolmates but that is the price we sissies pay for our interest in the feminine lifestyle.

In a strange way the teasing and ridicule that I endured as an effeminate boy hardened me and made me more determined than ever to persist in my sissy behavior. By the age of sixteen I had gained sufficient confidence in myself to wear full female costumes to Halloween parties or to other events where costumes were in vogue. We were now in the midst of World War II and men were supposed to be men and go and fight. But strangely there seemed to be more opportunities than ever to crossdress.

My mother and aunt were U.S.O.

volunteers and regularly entertained transient servicemen in the Savannah area with concerts, parties, plays and dances. Through my mother I got involved with a drama group that gave skits and plays. Not infrequently I took female parts and dressed accordingly with my mother's help. I was allowed to do this not because the group lacked enough women to fill all of the parts but because it added comedy to the productions to have a male playing a female role. I made a credible female and drew more than one admiring whistle from the audiences of soldiers and sailors.

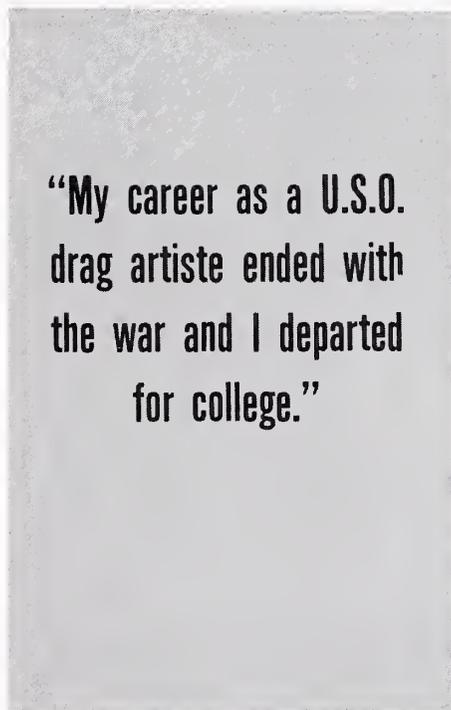

At age eighteen I went to a church Halloween party in a formal evening dress lent by my mother whose clothing now fit me perfectly. I borrowed a theatrical wig from the U.S.O. wardrobe closet and turned out as a Southern belle femme fatale. Two girlfriends escorted me and until I removed my mask at midnight no one guessed my true identity.

I was now appearing regularly in U.S.O. shows and had developed a comedy routine based on my impressions of Bette Davis and Rita Hayworth, the two great pin-up stars of that era. I didn't really look like either one of them but I could do their voices fairly well and I parodied some of their lines from motion pictures.

As I continued to entertain at the U.S.O. I found it easier to spend more and more time dressed in feminine attire. The dressing rooms at the old theater we used for our productions were small and crowded. I asked Mother if it would be all right to get into my costumes at home, go to the theater and appear, and then come home to change back. It took some persuading but she finally agreed. Had my father been alive the permission for such a thing would never have been granted. He had passed on in 1941, the victim of cancer.

Mother always drove me to and from the theater in our rattling 1938 Dodge coupe. She did not always stay to see the show and occasionally I hitched rides home with other cast members. One night my ride, a young woman of twenty-five whose husband was away in the Marine Corps, persuaded me to come along with other cast members to a nightclub where U.S.O. volunteers and servicemen gathered frequently following a show. Mother had never given her permission for such an outing but I was now eighteen years old and feeling quite sophisticated. Fortunately I was wearing a costume that night that was halfway acceptable off the stage. It was the sort of outfit that the Andrews sisters might wear — a long straight skirt topped with a military-like tunic jacket with a fitted waist and flaring hem that fell to mid-thigh. I had my hips padded into a sensuous, curving derriere that was tightly girdled. The narrow hem of the skirt and my skyscraper high heeled shoes ensured a rather sexy, swinging gait. Perched on top of my upswept-styled wig was pinned a tiny pillbox hat with a veil that could be lowered provocatively over a heavily made-up face.

No sooner had we been seated at the nightclub than I found myself in the midst of a group of sailors who had just arrived from the Atlantic theater. Some of them had just seen my act in the U.S.O. show. No secret was made of the fact that I was in reality a man under all the makeup and feminine garb. But they didn't seem to care at all about my sex, so hungry were they for contact with anything that was feminine. There was more than one unwanted advance but I fought them off with some help from my Marine Corps escort. When I arrived home breathless from this experience two hours late I found my mother waiting up and not in a pleasant mood. When she learned where I had been she was rather upset and afterwards insisted on picking me up at the theater each and every night.

My career as a U.S.O. drag artiste came to an end with the war and I departed for college grateful that I would not have to serve in the army. I continued to crossdress at every opportunity in college and appeared publicly on several occasions at fraternity parties dressed as a female.

As I grew older I began to adapt myself to being physically masculine and learned how to conduct myself among men. Being in a college fraternity had a great deal to do with this change of direction. Christine Jorgensen had yet to make history as a transsexual and for me there seemed to be no other alternative but to learn how to be a man if I wished to make my living. For a while I rejected and denied my sissy heritage. But, no matter what I did or told myself, those memories of my times in skirts haunted and never left my heart.

I was married and began a professional career. I had four children of my own and raised them. I continued to dress in female clothing in secret for many years and hid my transvestism from my wife and children. Ten years ago I decided it was time to share that part of my life with my wife. She took the news calmly enough but does not encourage me to crossdress. I have never told my children and have no plans to do so.

I still dress as a woman when I have the opportunity on a trip or when my wife is away visiting our children and grandchildren without me. I have a modest wardrobe and can still get myself dolled up in fine fashion. It would be more fun with an understanding wife but I am not malcontent. I have my pictures and my memories.
